

What Citation Type Should You Use in NoodleTools?

STEP 1. SELECT THE SOURCE TYPE YOU ARE USING FIRST

To Determine the Citation Type, Use the Following Hints.

Websites-Paid and Free sites
*Always include a URL on your website citations.
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Discovery Education CultureGrams CIA Factbook 	Whether they are free websites or paid websites, you should always include a URL in these citations.
Reference Source (Dictionary, Encyclopedia, etc.)
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ABC-CLIO databases— <ul style="list-style-type: none"> *World Geography-Understanding A Changing World, *Country Reports, 	These are Reference Databases because the information comes from Subject Specific Encyclopedias published by specific companies, like ABC-CLIO.
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Grolier Online Worldbook Online 	All Encyclopedias use this citation type.
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Reference articles found in general databases 	These will be found under a Reference tab. (See next section for details)

General Databases General Databases house information from many different source types.	NOTE: If you use any of the sources below, you need to check to see what TYPE of source you have located and are using
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> SIRS Discoverer
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> World History in Context Science in Context 	Everything <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Reference (45) ← Images (2) Primary Sources (1) Academic Journals (44) News (3,883) ← Magazines (251) ← Case Overview (1) Videos (19) Audio (96)
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> KidSearch & MiddleSearch

STEP 2. IF YOU USED A REFERENCE SOURCE OR GENERAL DATABASE, CLICK ON DATABASE TO SHOW HOW YOU ACCESSED THE MATERIAL

When should you include a URL?

MLA 7 suggests that you DO NOT include a URL in your Database citations. However, you SHOULD include a URL on website citations.

*You should ALWAYS include the URL on your notecard, however.