Memory & Meaning

May 10, 1933

Public burnings of “un-German” books occur across Germany. Photograph taken on May 10, 1933.

Additional Information:

Books written by Jews, communists, socialists, and anyone else whose beliefs seemed to contradict those of the Nazi party, were burned by members of the SA (Storm Troopers or Brownshirts) and university students across Germany.

August 1, 1936

Germany hosts the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin in August, 1936.

Additional Information:

The Olympic torchbearer runs past the Brandenburg Gates, festooned with Nazi banners, on his way to the stadium.

November 10, 1938

Jewish businesses and synagogues are destroyed in the November Pogroms, a government-ordered riot later known as Kristallnacht (Night of Broken Glass) on November 9–10, 1938.

Additional Information:

Kristallnacht is considered by many historians to have been the turning point in the Nazis' treatment of Jews. Afterwards, for the first time, 30,000 Jewish men and teenage boys were sent to concentration camps solely because of their religion.

1945

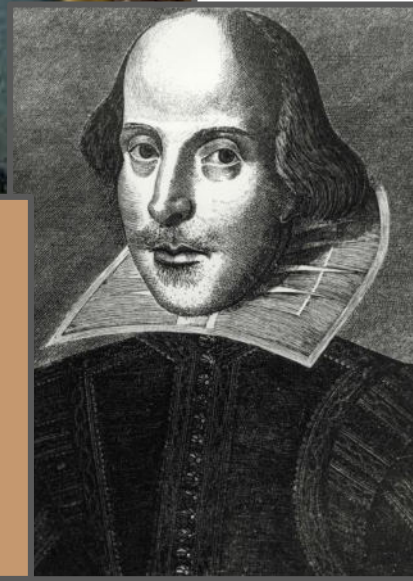

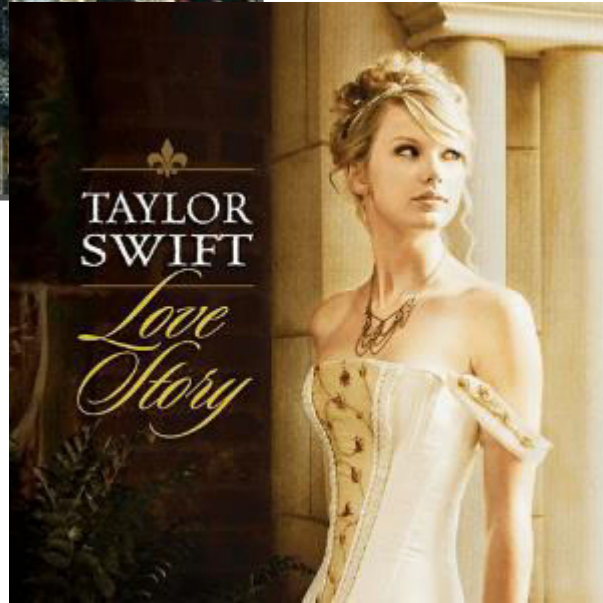

As World War II ends, concentration camps are liberated by Allied and Soviet forces.

Additional Information:

The camps were liberated by Allied and Soviet troops who had no idea what they would be finding. Most survivors went on to live at transit camps for months or years, since they had nowhere else to go. In this picture taken by soldiers who liberated Buchenwald, a young Elie Wiesel is visible on the far side of the right-hand center bunk, just next to the post.

Shakespeare

「Enter」 Chorus.

Two households, both alike in dignity
(In fair Verona, where we lay our scene),
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes 5
A pair of star-crossed lovers take their life;
Whose misadventured piteous overthrows
Doth with their death bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-marked love
And the continuance of their parents' rage, 10
Which, but their children's end, naught could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which, if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

「Chorus exits.」

“But soft, what light through yonder window breaks? It is the East, and Juliet is the sun.”

“Learn from me, if not by my precepts, at least by my example, how dangerous is the acquirement of knowledge and how much happier that man is who believes his native town to be the world, than he who aspires to become greater than his nature will allow.” Mary Shelley

Beaufort lay on a bed of sickness, incapable of any exertion. His daughter attended him with the greatest tenderness. Several months passed in this manner. Her father grew worse, and in the tenth month died in her arms, leaving her an orphan and a beggar. This last blow overcame her, and she knelt by Beaufort's coffin, weeping bitterly, when my father entered the chamber. He came like a protecting spirit to the poor girl, and after the interment of his friend he conducted her to Geneva. Two years after this event Caroline became his wife.

@surlybassey

When we lived in public housing my mom started a community garden to grow food to save money and to occupy the kids that lived there and the public housing authority came & pulled out all the plants and poured bleach into the ground to destroy it. Because gardens weren't allowed.
