Drafting Memory Poems

Now that you've planned and revised your ideas, it's time to draft your memory poem! As you work, you should consult the description of your memory that you prepared with the Nikki Giovanni lesson (Lesson 3) and the revision work you did in the Langston Hughes lesson (Lesson 5.) Use these materials as you answer the following questions:

1. In one sentence, type the topic of your memory.

2. In revision, you developed a simile to show readers how you felt in this memory. Type that simile here.

3. Pick one important word that you want to stress as a way of showing your poem's tone. Type that word here.

4. How will you emphasize the word you picked in question 3?
Type your answer.

I will emphasize it through repetition.

I will emphasize it by putting it right before a line break.

I will emphasize it by using repetition and by putting it right before a line break.
