2022-23 AP US History Syllabus

Course Description

Advanced Placement United States history (APUSH) is a college-level course taught in high school. As such it presents students with several distinct advantages as well as some unique challenges when compared to typical high school honors courses. One advantage of APUSH is that students can receive college credit if they earn a qualifying score on the APUSH exam. This can save them time and money in college. Enrollment in A.P. classes can also give students an edge in admissions when applying to college. Most importantly, by exposing students to college-level rigor in a high school setting, A.P. can prepare students for much greater success in their university coursework.

However, that same level of rigor makes A.P. courses significantly harder than honors courses and even most freshman courses in college. The main reason why A.P. classes are so challenging is that the A.P. exam must be rigorous enough to convince colleges that students who pass an A.P. exam deserve college credit even though they are still in high school. A.P. classes are also difficult because students are younger than they will be in college. Additionally, less time is available for study and review as A.P. exams are taken before the end of a school year.

As a result, only bright, motivated, and disciplined students are likely to succeed in this course and on the APUSH exam. Even though good attendance and completing homework are essential to success, they are not enough. Students will have to demonstrate their mastery of essential skills and content on college-level exams and essays. This will require a level of hard work and study that may be new to students. Some students may struggle at first as they adjust to the workload, expectations, and pace. Students involved in extracurricular activities, taking multiple A.P. classes, and/or have a job need to make sure they have enough time and discipline to manage all their commitments successfully. See the College Board's A.P. U.S. History Course and Exam Description for more details about the course.

The AP US History Exam

The A.P. U.S. History exam, administered Friday May 5, 2023, is 3 hours and 15 minutes long. There are four components to the exam: stimuli-based multiple choice (40%), short answer questions (20%), a document-based essay question (25%) and a long essay question (15%). The exam is graded on a five-point scale. Generally, most public universities award credit or placement to students who earn a 3 or higher while many private colleges require a score of 4 or higher. See the College Board's AP credit policy page for more details.

All students enrolled in this class second semester are expected to take the A.P. U.S. History exam. Each A.P. exam will cost approximately $100. Even though A.P. exam scores will not factor into students' class grades, doing well on an A.P. Exam has several clear benefits: providing students an edge in college admissions, saving students and parents money on college tuition, accelerating students' path toward college graduation.

Academic Objectives

- Students will understand and analyze major historical developments in U.S. history.
- Students will critically interpret primary and secondary source materials.
- Students will write persuasive analytical arguments supported with specific evidence.
- Students will cultivate the disciplinary practices and reasoning skills of a historian.
- Students will be well prepared for and take the A.P. United States History exam.
- Students will acquire the knowledge and skills to successfully participate in our democracy.

Student Behavior

A.P. students are expected to be self-motivated and take the initiative for their learning. The course and exam require students to master both content and skills and tests will be designed to assess both. However, since successful skill building requires supervised practice and regular feedback, most of the content will shifted to homework in the form of textbook readings, video lectures, and reading guides. This "flipped classroom" approach will allow students the opportunity to learn the content at their own pace and put that learning into practice in the classroom. However, since there will be minimal lecture and direct instruction in the classroom, it is imperative that students read, watch, and complete all homework to their best of their ability. Otherwise, they will not have the content base to meaningfully build upon in class activities and will not have the knowledge to successfully answer many exam questions. As with any endeavor, students will get out of this class what they put into it. Therefore, students should strive to do their best on every assignment and read with the intention of learning rather than simply "getting it done" if they want to maximize their chances of success.

Punctuality and good attendance are required to succeed in any course. Absent students (excused and unexcused, but not missing or truant) will be allowed the same number of days to make up any work missed while absent.

Cheating

Cheating is any attempt to take credit for work that is not one's own, even if accidental. It is an affront to the teacher and fellow students and violates the Ayala High School Honor Policy as found in the Student Handbook (p. 129) and CVUSD policy. Any student caught cheating will be given a zero and may be subject to a parent and/or administrative conference. A second instance of cheating will result in an administrative conference and a Saturday intervention. A third offense may result in expulsion from the class with a W/F placed on the student's transcript. Certain cheating offenses, as discussed in the student handbook, may immediately result in third offense penalties.

Grading

Student grades are calculated on a weighted basis as listed below with a majority of a student's grade based on test, essay and quiz performance. As such, it is vital that students consistently exert maximal effort to master the skills and content needed to succeed in A.P. U.S. History. Overall grades are calculated to a tenth of percent and those ending in a .5 through .9 will be rounded up to the next whole number. Overall grades are not curved and not based on a student's A.P. score on the May exam. The Chino Valley Unified School District and many colleges apply an extra grade point for A.P. courses to reward students for challenging themselves with college level coursework while in high school.

Categories: Assessments (60%), Practice (20%), Assignments (20%)

Grading Scale: A (90%–100%), B (80–89), C (70–79%), D (60–69%), F (0–59%)

Assessments

Tests are designed to measure student mastery of the material. Two types of summative assessments will be primarily used in the course: end of unit exams and timed writes. The former will usually consist of stimuli-based multiple-choice questions and a short answer question. The latter will be a document-based essay question or long essay question. Taken together, the question types on these assessments mirror the questions that students will face on the AP exam in May. Unit exams will be given every 2–5 weeks while timed writes will take place every 4–8 weeks. Each assessment may cover any of the material students have been exposed to (textbook, primary source readings, discussions, video, etc.) in the current unit of study and the preceding units. Students who are absent, but not truant, may make-up an exam in accordance with district policies, but those students may face different (and possibly harder) questions. Students who perform below standard on a summative assessment may be required to remediate. Reading quizzes may also be given to assess how well students have read and reviewed a chapter.

Practice

Formative assessments consist of AP content and/or skill questions designed to help students and teachers identify areas of strength and weaknesses before an assessment. It is essential that students complete all assigned online practice to the best of their ability without cheating or using outside resources. Practice will generally be graded for completion credit. Due to technical difficulties inherent in each platform and the need for students to complete practice before assessments, practice assignments on AP Classroom and LaunchPad will not be reopened or have their deadlines extended.

Assignments

All other work that students do in and outside of class such as outlines, textbook questions, and participation that are not assessments or practice are placed in this category. Some smaller assignments may be graded on a completion basis while others will receive a traditional score, depending on the activity. Late work will be accepted for half credit before the end of unit and not accepted afterwards, CVUSD attendance policies and extreme situations notwithstanding.

Extra Credit: Students may occasionally be offered extra credit opportunities. Any extra credit will be limited, equally available to all students, and is not meant to replace the assigned work.

AP US History Syllabus Overview

The following summary is meant to highlight some of the key points about the course. Please read the entire syllabus and sign at the bottom of this page.

- A.P. U.S. history is as hard as or harder than a college freshman class.
- Students will learn much more in an A.P. class than any regular class.
- Most students do not earn an A in an A.P. course. However, A.P. students are given an extra grade point for GPA calculation per district policy.
- Students who take A.P. classes usually do much better in college.
- The class will cover one unit per month for most months.
- A.P. U.S. history students will read an entire college textbook by mid-April.
- 90% of the second semester grade will be established by the 12th week.
- Students who are motivated, disciplined, and take the initiative will do well.
- All students are encouraged to take the $100 A.P. Exam on May 5, 2023.
- AP exam scores will not be factored into semester grades.
- The instructor may make changes to the syllabus as necessary.
- Cheating will result in a zero and additional consequences as warranted.
