THE JOHN A. WILSON BUILDING: A CENTENNIAL OVERVIEW

Some Important Facts, Dates and Events Associated with the Seat of Government of the District of Columbia

- 1902 Congress enacts legislation acquiring Square 255 and authorizing construction of a permanent seat of government for the District of Columbia (June 6).
- 1908 District (Wilson) Building is dedicated. Speakers and guests include Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives and Mayors of Baltimore and Richmond. Declaration of Independence is read by a member of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia. Thousands attend the ceremony and tour the building (July 4).
- 1909 Bust of Crosby Stuart Noyes is unveiled in District (Wilson) Building. Funds are privately raised to commission the bust. Noyes (1825-1908) had been the editor of The Washington Evening Star. In 1888, Noyes persuaded the U.S. Senate for the first time ever to draft and consider a proposal to give D.C. voting representation in both the U.S. House and Senate. Throughout his life, Noyes advocated voting rights for residents of the District of Columbia (February 25).
- 1909 The Statue of Governor Alexander Robey Shepherd (1835-1902), a D.C. native, is unveiled in front of the District (Wilson) Building (May 3). Until 2005, when a statue of D.C. native, John Phillip Sousa, was unveiled near the Marine Barracks on Capitol Hill, Shepherd's statue was the only one of a D.C. native anywhere in the Nation's Capital.
- 1920 Memorial sculpture honoring D.C. government employees who died in World War I is unveiled in memorial ceremony by Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Woodrow Wilson. The marble memorial is the work of Jerome Conner and depicts a dying soldier (April 6).
- 1921 Oil portrait of District of Columbia Governor Alexander Robey Shepherd is hung in the Boardroom (Council Chamber) of the District (Wilson)
 Building. Shepherd's widow, Mary Young Shepherd, officially presents the portrait to be displayed in the seat of government during a ceremony (April 21). The portrait remained in the Chamber until about 1970.

- 1928 The Federal Triangle Act mandated a major federal building program of imposing design. The demolition of the District (Wilson) Building in order to provide another site for a new Federal building or a park was anticipated under provisions of this Act.
- 1931 U.S. Senator Hiram Bingham (R-CT), chair of the Senate D.C.Appropriations Subcommittee, acts to avert demolition of the District (Wilson) Building. The Senator says he is moved to act by letters from students and the public.
- 1938 President of the Board of Commissioners, Melvin C. Hazen, announces selection of D.C. flag design and orders flag to be flown daily (except Sundays) at District (Wilson) Building (October 15).
- 1941 Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen dies suddenly at his desk (July 15). Hazen led the effort to give D. C. a flag.
- 1942 U.S. Army soldiers are quartered on ground floor of District (Wilson) Building. Troops are on duty to guard bridges and federal buildings.
- 1950 A replica of Liberty Bell cast in France is placed at main entrance of District (Wilson) Building. The bell was a duplicate of the original without the crack. All 48 States and the District of Columbia received a bell. The bells were to be prominently displayed to inspire patriotism and promote sale of U.S. Savings Bonds. By 1960, the bell was sited in a small street island in front of the District Building. It disappeared in 1979 during construction of Western (Freedom) Plaza.
- 1953 President Eisenhower appoints Samuel Spencer, a D.C. native, to the Board of Commissioners. As Board President, Spencer initiates an order directing all hiring and promotions in the D.C. government to be based solely on qualifications and merit without regard to "race, creed, or color."
- 1959 A portrait by Margaret Elliot of former Commissioner Louis Brownlow is presented to the D.C. Government and hung in Room 500 of the District (Wilson) Building (January 26). Brownlow, a pioneer of the public administration training movement, served as Commissioner from 1915 to 1921. He was appointed by President Woodrow Wilson.

- 1961 John B. Duncan becomes the first African-American appointed a Commissioner. He was nominated by President John F. Kennedy and served until 1967, when the D.C. government was reorganized.
- 1964 A ceremony accepting a memorial tablet honoring D.C. native Stewart Holland to be placed in the vestibule of the District (Wilson) Building is held (May 22). On September 22, 1854, Holland fired a ship's cannon for four hours, trying to attract rescuers to the steamship Arctic, which was sinking off the Grand Banks. He went down with the ship.
- The nine-member appointed Council under the D.C. Government Reorganization Act meets for the first time in the District (Wilson)
 Building (November 7). John Hechinger is designated Chair, Walter E.
 Fauntroy, Vice-Chair. Three Republicans serve on this first appointed Council.
- 1970 A bronze bust of former Commissioner John B. Duncan is unveiled in a ceremony and placed on public display outside the Council Chamber. The sculpture is the work of Nathaniel P. Gillian. Duncan preferred a bust over customary oil portraits of Commissioners.
- 1970 Citizen meetings in District (Wilson) Building lead to organization of D.C. Statehood Party.
- 1975 Mayor Walter E. Washington is administered the oath of office in front of the District (Wilson) Building by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall (January 2). Washington is the first elected Mayor of the District of Columbia and assumes office with the first elected Council chaired by Sterling Tucker.
- 1976 John A. Nevius, Chair (1972-1975) of the Appointed Council, writes editor of the Washington Post, noting that the District (Wilson) Building is an outstanding example of a Palladian revival architecture design (May 29, 1976). Nevius further illustrates that our Seat of Government is, in fact, practically a replica of Palazzo da Porto Festa by Italian architect Andrea Palladio (1508-1580).
- 1977 Armed Hanafi Muslims take over District (Wilson) Building. Maurice Williams, a reporter for WHUR-FM, is fatally shot. Special police officer Mark Cantrell dies two days later from gunshot wounds. Councilmember Marion S. Barry recovers from a gunshot wound near his heart. The 40-hour siege ends after ambassadors from three Islamic nations negotiate a surrender to authorities (March 9).

- 1979 Mayor Marion S. Barry is administered oath of office in front of District (Wilson Building) by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall II (January 2).
- 1979 The Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corporation (PADC) removes statue of Governor Shepherd from the park in front of the District (Wilson) Building. The Park is incorporated into Western (Freedom) Plaza. PADC officials never carry out a pledge to relocate statue on Pennsylvania Avenue. Shepherd goes into a 25-year exile near Blue Plains Sewage Treatment Plant.
- 1993 The Council of the District of Columbia enacts legislation designating the seat of government the "John A. Wilson Building" (October 6).
- 1997 Council Chair, David A. Clarke, becomes the first elected official of the District of Columbia to lie in state in the Wilson Building (April 3).
- 2002 Official re-opening of the John A. Wilson Building following renovation. Public is invited for a ceremony and tours of the renovated seat of government (June 29).
- 2003 Former Mayor Walter E. Washington lies in state in Wilson Building (October 31).
- 2005 Governor Shepherd's statue is returned to Wilson Building. Council Chair Linda Cropp, Council members Jim Graham and Jack Evans, Mayor Anthony Williams, and DDOT Director Dan Tangherlini respond to campaign of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia to bring Shepherd home to our seat of government (January 29).
- 2007 A plaque honoring the life of Maurice Williams is placed outside the Press Room. A plaque placed earlier was lost during Wilson Building renovation (March 12).
