Dear Parents, Guardians, and Caregivers,

At our Parent University Safety and Security Pre-Session, Dr. Carver reviewed terms we use with students which are often associated with drills. I thought it would be important to all our stake-holders an overview of the terms:

Lock Out: A lock out is when we have been informed of some type of outside threat on the campus. We conduct business as usual in the building, but will not let anyone inside the building (including parents). Any students outside (i.e., physical education or recess) will be brought in. We would notify parents by email if we have any type of lock out drill. In the event of an actual lock out, we would likely notify parents by phone, text, and/or email.

Hold: A hold is when we ask students to stay in classrooms for a very short period of time. It is typically not associated with any threat. Students and staff are not locked in and visitors can enter the building. An example of a hold is when a staff member or student needs to be transported by ambulance for a medical reason. We would not typically notify parents of a hold, unless there was an unusual experience.

Lock Down: Lock down is when an intruder or criminal act is occurring in the building. Students and staff go into a locked space, out of view. Other than law enforcement, no one is allowed in or out of the building during a lock down. We would notify parents by email, phone, and/or text if we have any type of lock down (actual) and by email only (drill).

Shelter in Place: Shelter in Place is typically related to a weather emergency. We would ask students and staff to stay in place, but they would not be locked inside. We typically do not drill for shelter in place. We would notify parents by phone, text, and/or email if we had a shelter in place experience.

Evacuation: Evacuation drills are when we practice evacuating the building, the most typical being a fire drill. If there is an actual evacuation, parents would be notified by phone, text, and/or email. If it is a drill, we will notify you by email.

As Dr Carver shared, it has been our practice to conduct drills both announced and unannounced. Given the recent incident in Florida, we all have a heightened awareness of the concerns students have, even when participating in drills. Therefore, while we normally will not publicly advise people of the drill prior to it occurring, we have decided to send you notice of some upcoming drills, likely the evening before. When we resume our unannounced drills, we will commit to emailing you after the drill to communicate the type of drill that was conducted, and talking points to discuss with your child.

Very truly yours,
Alison Salerno
Principal
