

JEAN SIBELIUS 1865-1957

Jean Sibelius is certainly Finland's most well-known composer. Like Grieg, Sibelius wrote during the Romantic Period and is considered a nationalistic composer. He didn't use Finnish folk tunes directly in his music, but he was inspired and greatly influenced by Finnish literature and folklore. Sibelius wrote many pieces of music, including symphonies, suites, vocal music, and tone poems, which are one-movement compositions that often suggest a story or mood.

Finlandia, a tone poem, is Sibelius' most famous work. It aroused great feelings of patriotism among his countrymen, which resulted in Sibelius being granted a pension from the Finnish government, allowing him to compose full-time. The main theme from this composition was chosen to be the National Anthem of Finland.

PETER ILYICH TCHAIKOVSKY 1840-1893

Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky was born in Russia. His father was a mine inspector who encouraged him to study to become a lawyer. After graduating from law school and working awhile for the government, Tchaikovsky studied piano and composition at the St. Petersburg Conservatory with Anton Rubinstein. He was such a superior student that after graduating from the conservatory, he became Professor of Harmony at the Moscow Conservatory for 12 years.

Tchaikovsky's six symphonies are among the most well-known and performed works of the Romantic period. In addition, he wrote the music for three ballets, Swan Lake (1876), The Sleeping Beauty (1889), and the ever popular Nutcracker (1892). In 1891, Tchaikovsky was invited to come to America to take part in the concert that marked the opening of Carnegie Hall in New York City.

EDWARD ELGAR 1857-1934

Edward Elgar is an English composer who wrote a number of well-known and frequently performed compositions towards the latter part of the Romantic period. He had a few violin lessons, but was largely self-taught, learning a lot by hanging around his father's music store. Starting at age 16, Elgar worked as a conductor, teacher, and performer on violin, bassoon, and organ. He started composing around this time, but his most famous works were not written until he was over 40 years old.

The famous Pomp and Circumstance that is often played at high school graduations is one of several Pomp and Circumstance marches he composed between 1901 and 1907. Elgar's most famous orchestral work is Enigma Variations (1899). Each variation of the Enigma Variations musically describes one of Elgar's friends. Elgar's music has a distinctively British sound, and because of his musical contributions he was knighted, and so is commonly referred to as Sir Edward Elgar.
