The Giraffe the Pelly and Me by Roald Dahl is a crazy, exciting book about a giraffe, a pelican, and a monkey that meet a boy they call their manager. The three of them bought an old grubber store and made a window company(co.) The Duke of Hamshier asked if they could clean his windows. When they arrived the action began.

I think the message Roald Dahl wanted to send to readers is work together to accomplish things. For example the three of them had a big job to do for the Duke of Hamshier. Also, they each had a special power so they had to learn how to work together with their powers. The Pelly had the power to retract his upper beak, the monkey had the power of speed, and the giraffe had the power to make her neck grow.

Roald Dahl uses a flashback in the beginning of the book to tell the reader about what the old grubber used to look like inside and out. A grubber is what a candy store use to be called.

While they were cleaning one of the main characters got shot. If you would like to find out what happens next you 'll have to read the book.

I recommend this book to elementary students because it has lots of pictures but some challenging words.
