Lesson Title: Flags of Latin America

Grade level: 6

Subject Area: Geography

Objectives:

Students will do the following:

1. Examine and record basic facts about a Latin American country
2. Learn the significance of that country's flag
3. Create a rendering of the flag and explain the meaning of its colors and design

Materials

- Map of South and Central America, including the Caribbean
- Large (4" x 6") index cards (one for each student)
- Colored markers (for each student)
- Plain printer paper
- Internet access
- Resources about the countries of Latin America

Procedures:

1. Choose Latin American (including Caribbean) countries for students to research, selecting one country per student in your class. Write the names of the countries on the top of large index cards.
2. Begin the lesson by showing students an American flag (or a picture of one, if you do not have one accessible). See a large image of the American flag at <http://www.graphicmaps.com/webimage/flags/usalarge.htm>.

As a class, briefly discuss the significance of the flag's symbols and colors. The 50 stars represent the states of the union, and the 13 stripes represent the 13 original colonies. The colors of the original flag did not have any symbolic meaning at the time. As part of the Great Seal, however, they were symbolic. White was chosen to signify purity and innocence; red, hardiness and valor; and blue, vigilance, perseverance, and justice. You may also want to look at your state flag and discuss its symbols. You can find links to state flags and information at <<http://www.mw.com/maps/mwmapstfk.html>>.

3. Explain to students that they are each going to research important facts about a country in Latin America. Once they've completed their research, they will study that country's flag, learn about its symbols, and re-create that flag to present to the class. To assign countries, hand out the index cards you have prepared. Have students use print and Internet resources to find facts about their countries. The following Web sites will be helpful:

<http://www.graphicmaps.com/webimage/countrys/sa.htm>

4. Ask students to complete the information below about their assigned countries on their index cards:

- Official name:
- Form of government:
- Current leader of country (position and name):
- Population:
- Capital city:
- Languages:
- Religions:
- Land area:
- Climate:
- Terrain:
- Official currency:
- Literacy rate:

5. Once students have completed their initial research, have them access the Web sites below, in addition to those already identified, to see the country's national flag and learn the significance of its symbols, colors, and mottoes. (In some cases, students may want to do additional research about the country's history to better understand the flag.) Explain that a flag may include colors, symbols, or mottoes that reflect the nation's history, government, resources, geography—even the spirit of its people. Ask students to consider the following questions:

- Has the flag changed throughout the country's history? If so, why? How has it changed?
- What does the current flag reflect about the nation?
- Explain the significance of the flag's symbols, colors, or mottoes.
- Are any of the facts you learned about the country reflected in its flag?
- Did you learn anything new about the country from its flag?

6. Have students use plain printer paper and colored markers to re-create their flags. Students should pin their flag images around a class map of Latin America. Have each student put his or her index card with information about the country below the appropriate flag. Then connect each flag to its country on the map with a piece of ribbon or string.

7. Ask students to make brief presentations about their flags in which they explain the significance of the flags' symbols and colors.

Discussion Questions

1. What are some common themes found in the flags of Latin American countries?

2. Name three types of information that can be expressed about a country through its flag.

(Answers may include a country's history, its government, its geography, its resources, or even the spirit of its people.) Give an example of each.

3. What are some reasons that flags may change during a country's history? Why do you think this is important?
