Purpose of Work-Based Learning

"Work experience as a teenager will be one of the common denominators of all successful people in the future. It is no longer good enough to be just educated. Young people entering the world of work must also be prepared, or they will struggle for years to come. Work-based learning is a primary ingredient in that preparation process." Chad Foster

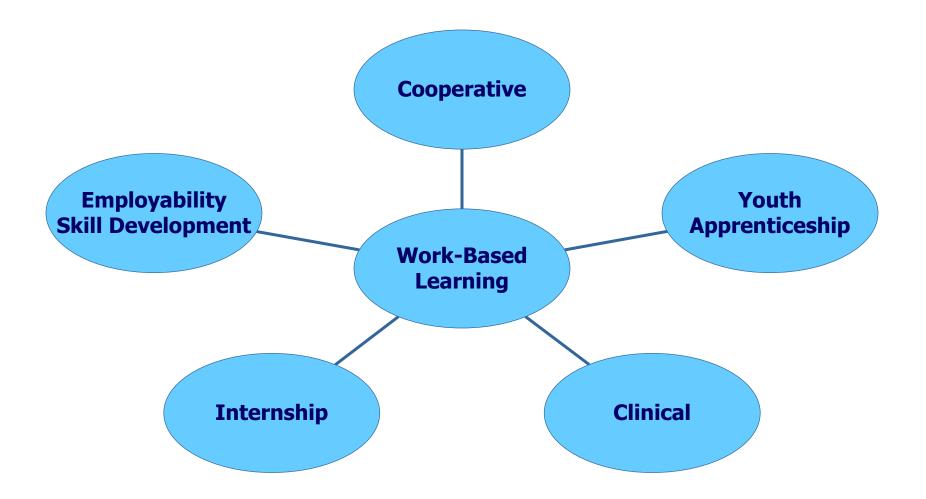

Work-Based Learning Program

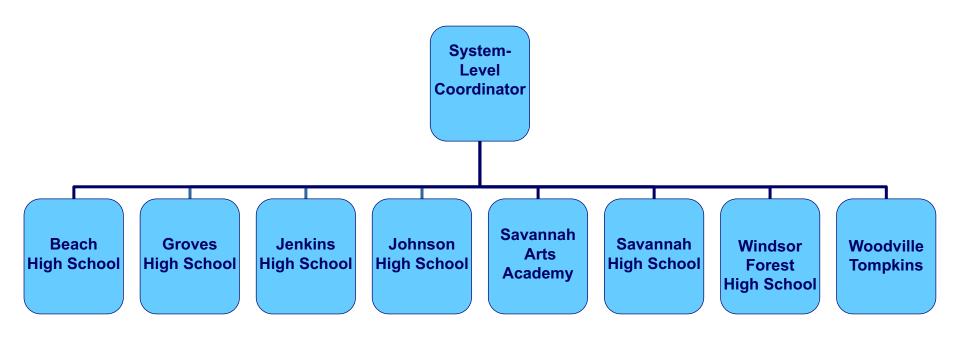

- Provides a planned program of job training and work experience for a student, paid or nonpaid
- Assists the student in career exploration and selection of a career major
- Teaches job skills that relate to the student's career major
