Fuzzy, Buzzy Bees

Honeybees seem busy as they buzz here and there. When they land on a flower, some dust called pollen (PAHL-in) sticks to their fuzzy bodies. They carry pollen with them from flower to flower. Pollen helps flowers make seeds.

Inside each flower are sweet drops of nectar. Bees suck up some nectar and fly back home to their hive. There they store the nectar in cells. The nectar turns to honey, which the bees eat. People eat honey too.
