Featured Speakers

Dr. Rick Melmer, the Secretary of the Department of Education for South Dakota, will be the banquet speaker. Dr. Melmer will address his assessment of and vision for mathematics and science education in South Dakota.

Jay Trobec has been the Chief Meteorologist at KELO-TV since 1997. When he is NOT at home with family, he's busy in the Live Doppler Storm Center. He has the "Seal of Approval" from both the National Weather Association (NWA) and the American Meteorological Society (AMS). Jay has discovered a lot about the weather history of this area. He will share what he has learned by presenting case studies of significant weather events.

Penny Roberts, who has recently been named Kentucky's Teacher of the Year is an elementary curriculum specialist from Greenville, Kentucky. She brings her expertise to life in her innovative and energetic sessions. Penny will share teaching and assessing strategies for teachers at the elementary level. Don't miss her crime solving session using mathematics.

Nancy Berkas is the Regional Affiliate Representative for NCTM and serves as the link from NCTM to SDCTM. She is also a consultant for the North Central Eisenhower Mathematics and Science Consortium. Nancy will share "Powerful Practices in Mathematics and Science".

Melissa Horton is the Director of Wildlife Experiences, Inc. Her presentation will include birds of prey.

Mobile Science Lab

The Mobile Science Lab will be parked near the Crossroads for Conference participants to visit. Jerry Opbroek and Bob Vanderlinde will be available to answer questions. They will also conduct several sessions Friday and Saturday for all interested teachers—both those who have had the MSL at their schools and those who would like to have it come to them.

"The Outdoor Education Journey" is a partnership between non-profit organizations, outdoor education programs, educational destinations, and the BHSU-NSTA Student Chapter. These students will help participants learn and find out about many environment and outdoor programs available in South Dakota and other states as well as learning materials and field trip ideas for classroom teachers. The first thirty participants will receive a free backpack filled with new ideas and materials. Hands-on and fun activities will provide teachers with a flavor of these curricula.

Working together to present this session are the Black Hills State University – National Science Teachers Association Student Chapter; SD Discovery Center, Project Wet; SD Project Learning Tree; Washington Pavilion of Arts and Science; SD Game, Fish, and Parks – Project Wild; SD Agriculture in the Classroom; USDA/NRCS Conservation Service.
