About This Publication

Student Financial Aid for North Carolinians is a guide for North Carolina students and their families about how to pay for education beyond high school. Published by the North Carolina State Education Assistance Authority (NCSEAA), this guide takes the student through all steps necessary to find and apply for higher education funding.

Students and families start with the Free Application for Federal Student Aid, or FAFSA, and then are introduced to the many sources of funding, including federal and state grant and scholarship programs, private scholarships offered by North Carolina's businesses and organizations, and higher education loans.

The NCSEAA actively participates in College Foundation of North Carolina (CFNC) to provide a one-stop resource for college access. This collaborative effort also involves College Foundation Inc., the University of North Carolina, the North Carolina Community College System, North Carolina Independent Colleges and Universities, and the Department of Public Instruction.

PLEASE NOTE:

Unless otherwise stated, the NCSEAA does not distribute applications for the various scholarship programs listed in this booklet. Obtain grant, scholarship, and loan applications through the contact information listed in each entry's description. The federal financial aid form, (FAFSA) is available every year on October 1 for completion and submission. The FAFSA should be completed as soon after October 1 as possible with assistance available throughout the school year.

- Financial aid administrators at North Carolina college and university campuses work with students, families, and high schools to help with FAFSA completion. CFNC's financial aid map identifies every N.C. campus and provides financial aid contact information: <https://www.cfnc.org/pay-for-college/fafsa-assistance/>.
- Each high school's school counseling program provides guidance and assistance with FAFSA completion and other financial aid resources. Your school counselor may have scholarship opportunities provided by local businesses and organizations.
- Federal Financial Aid, studentaid.gov, provides step-by-step instructions for completing the FAFSA and other information from start to finish on all financial aid topics and needs.

An Overview of Financial Assistance for Students

What are you going to do after high school?

For many students, that question is difficult to answer when there is no money to pay for vocational or technical training, or for a two-year or four-year college. Fortunately, there is a lot of money available to help students reach their dreams of a college education or training beyond high school. The following information briefly describes the types of aid available and how to apply for financial aid.

Types of Financial Aid

There are three types of financial aid available to students:

1. Scholarships or Grants: Money that does not have to be repaid or earned; it is sometimes referred to as “free money”. Scholarships and grants are available based on the student’s financial need (need-based) or based on the student’s academic achievements or special talents (merit-based).
2. Work: Funds that a student earns through a job on or off the college campus. The student has the opportunity to work and earn money to assist with the expenses associated with college.
3. Loans: Funds that must be repaid either in cash, usually with interest, or through service. Loans made with a service option usually require that the student repay the loan after graduation by working a specified number of years in a particular field.

Applying for Financial Aid

To be considered for financial aid, students must apply using the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The application is available at studentaid.gov or you may call 800-4-FEDAID (800- 433-3243). As the name says, there is no charge to complete this application and by doing so, you will be considered for all types of federal financial aid.

It is important to complete this form before the deadlines published by the college you wish to attend. The federal government has recently made several changes to make applying for aid easier. For students attending college in the 2023-24 school year, FAFSA applications will be available for completion on October 1. Additionally, families use tax information from 2021 to complete the 2023-24 FAFSA.

All students who want to be considered for financial aid should complete the FAFSA; however, some colleges and universities, as well as some separate scholarship programs, require additional forms.

Students should check with the college they wish to attend to see if there are additional forms to be completed. Local service clubs, civic organizations, employers, churches, and others have college scholarships available. Usually, your high school counselor will have information on how to apply for these scholarships.

- Students may want to explore other sources of financial aid by completing a scholarship search program on the internet. Check out CFNC's scholarship page at: <https://www.cfnc.org/pay-for-college/scholarship-search/>
- It is generally not advisable for students to pay for a search, especially with so many free searches available on the internet. Your school counselor or the financial aid office at the college you wish to attend can recommend additional websites for your use.
- The best and most comprehensive online source for free financial aid information for North Carolina residents is College Foundation of North Carolina, CFNC.org. The website also provides comprehensive information to help students plan for and apply to college.

Paying For College

Financial aid is money to help you pay for education beyond high school. It can be given, borrowed, or earned to help pay for college. Without financial aid, some students would not be able to pursue an education beyond high school or achieve their career goals.

Financial aid falls into two categories: need-based or non-need-based.

- Need-based aid refers to student assistance offered because a student's financial circumstances would not permit him or her to afford the cost of a postsecondary education. The federal government and most states have need-based aid programs. Many colleges and universities also have need-based financial aid. Some examples of federal need-based aid include: the Federal Pell Grant, Federal Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant (FSEOG), Direct Subsidized Loans, and Federal Work-Study.
- Non-need-based aid is financial aid offered to students based on academic, artistic, athletic, or other notable achievement. Some examples of non-need-based aid include: some scholarships, Direct Unsubsidized Loans, Direct PLUS Loans, and private student loans.

Whether it is need-based or non-need-based, there are different types of financial aid, including:

- Grants: Grants are typically based on financial need and do not need to be repaid. There are a few exceptions that require the student to fulfill requirements or the grant may convert to a student loan, such as the Federal TEACH Grant.
- Scholarships: Many scholarships are offered based on merit such as academic achievement, athletic ability, artistic talent, background, or other attributes a student may possess.
- Work-Study: Federal Work-Study allows students to earn money through a campus-based employment program. The money earned is usually paid directly to the student by working an hourly wage and it is up to the student to manage this money wisely.
- Loans: Student loans are financial aid that must be repaid and should always be considered as a last resort in paying for college. Loans can be subsidized or unsubsidized but must be repaid after graduation or dropping below half-time enrollment status.

Students should always ask about any commitments they are making when they accept financial aid. Even grants or scholarships, which typically don't have to be repaid, may have requirements such as working in a specific career field in a designated location or maintaining a high grade point average. Not meeting the requirements may result in the scholarship or grant being terminated or turning into a loan which will have to be repaid.

Don't wait until your senior year to begin planning for college. In fact, the earlier you plan, the better prepared you will be for college. To be considered for student aid, a student must complete all forms required by the college, such as the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the CSS Profile, and/or institutional scholarship applications.

You can start researching where you may want to pursue education beyond high school based on your career interests. You can gather information on the programs, the costs, and location to help you determine if the school, college, or university will be a good fit.

In addition, you can start researching and, in some cases, applying for scholarships. You should become familiar with scholarship opportunities that might be a good match for your interests and abilities. By doing so, you can make sure you are able to meet all the eligibility requirements -- even if you must wait until your senior year to apply.

Apply early! Some financial aid is offered on a first-come, first-served basis. In addition, many colleges have FAFSA completion deadlines, and students who complete their FAFSA after the deadline may not be eligible for as much, or any, financial aid as students who submitted their FAFSA before the deadline.

Free Application for Federal Student Aid

The FAFSA must be completed to determine eligibility for federal and state financial aid programs. This includes the Federal Pell Grant, the Federal Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant, as well as Federal Work-Study and even federal student loans. Private foundations and other organizations may also use the FAFSA information to determine eligibility for scholarships.

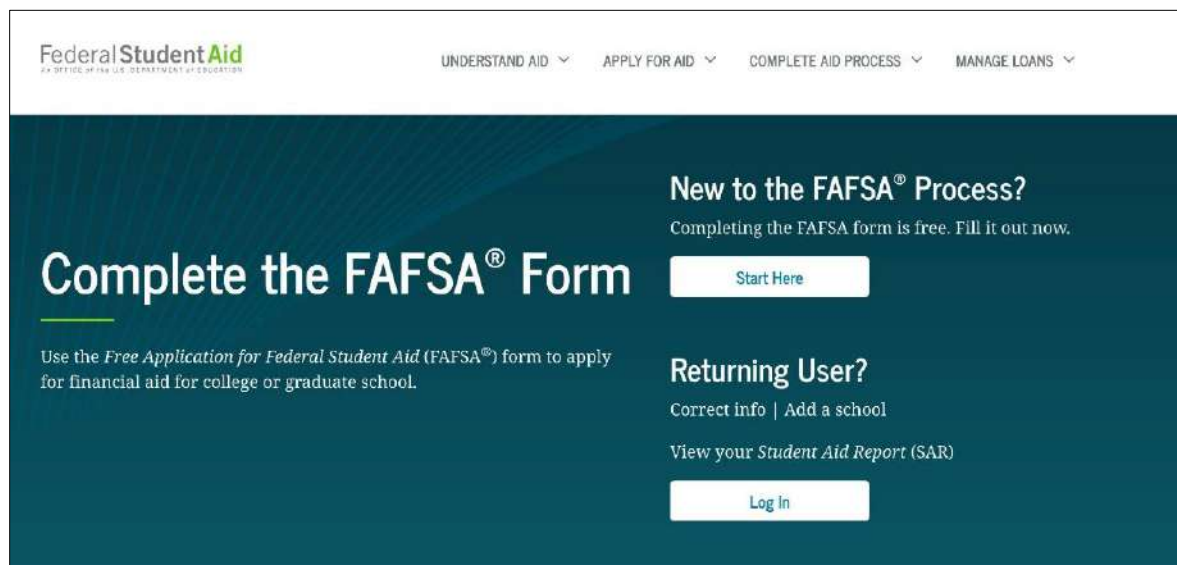

Eligibility for most federal, and for North Carolina aid programs, is based on financial need rather than academic achievement.

To receive aid funds, a student must be qualified to study at the postsecondary level. A student qualifies if the one of following applies:

- has a high school diploma or the recognized equivalent of a high school diploma, such as a general education development or GED certificate; or
- has completed a high school education in a homeschool setting approved by state law; or
- has enrolled in an eligible career pathway program and meets one of the U.S. Department of Education's "ability-to-benefit" alternatives.

State aid programs, private foundations, and other organizations have their own criteria for recipients. An example of a state requirement might be a minimum length of time the students has resided in the state. See the North Carolina State Grant and Scholarship Programs section of this book for more North Carolina information.

Establishing an FSA ID

To complete the FAFSA, you and at least one parent will need an FSA ID.

The FSA ID is a user name and password that gives access to Federal Student Aid systems. A student or parent should never share the FSA ID with anyone. Both students and parents should keep their FSA ID in a safe place for using it in the future.

The student uses the FSA ID to log in to the FAFSA, access the IRS Data Retrieval Tool in the FAFSA, sign the FAFSA, apply for Direct Loans, and access the student's aid history on the National Student Loan Data System (NSLDS).

The parent of a dependent student uses the FAFSA to access the IRS Data Retrieval Tool in the FAFSA, sign the FAFSA, and apply for a Direct PLUS Loan.

Here are the steps for establishing an FSA ID:

1. Go to fsaid.ed.gov to establish an FSA ID.
2. Enter an email address unique to the student or parent requesting the FSA ID.

NOTE: The student and parent cannot use the same email address for FSA ID purposes.

Completing the FAFSA

You should complete the FAFSA as soon as possible after October 1 in the year before you are requesting aid. For example, if you plan to attend college in the fall after you graduate from high school, you should complete the FAFSA in your senior year. Check school websites for school-specific deadlines.

1. Apply for an FSA ID at fsaid.ed.gov. The FSA ID allows you to sign the FAFSA electronically.
2. Complete the FAFSA at studentaid.gov as soon as possible after October 1 the year before you are requesting aid.
3. Check with the school you are attending for specific deadlines.
4. Have the following items for you and your parent(s), if applicable, on hand when you prepare to complete the FAFSA, such as Social Security cards, income tax information, and bank and investment account balances.
5. Answer all questions, including the schools to receive your FAFSA information.
6. Sign the FAFSA electronically with your FSA ID. If you cannot use an FSA ID, you can print, sign, and mail the signature page.
7. Review your Student Aid Report (SAR) when it is available. If you provide a student email address, the SAR availability information will be sent to your email.

Tips for Completing the FAFSA

Completing the FAFSA is not difficult, but some questions may not be as clear-cut as others:

- FSA ID: Students and parents cannot share an email address for FSA ID purposes. When establishing the student's FSA ID and password, students should not use a high school email address.
- Social Security Number: It is critical that students enter their social security number correctly. A common FAFSA error is entering this number incorrectly. Unfortunately, this error can delay a student's financial aid. To avoid this problem, it's recommended that students verify that their social security number is correct before submitting the FAFSA.
- Parent information: Students need to provide information on both parents if the parents are married OR unmarried and living together. Students who don't live with both of their parents need to look at which parent they lived with most during the last 12 months and report that parent's information (and the household information) on the FAFSA. If they didn't live with one parent more than the other, then they need to look at who provided more financial support.
- Household size: The household size on the FAFSA includes the parent(s) and children in the home, as well as others in the home if the parents provide at least half of the financial support.

- Number in college: The number in college on the FAFSA include the student and others (receiving at least half of their support from the parents) in the home attending college at least half time. Parents are NOT included in the number in college on the student's FAFSA.
- IRS Data Retrieval Tool: It is recommended to use the IRS DRT to fill part of the financial information on the FAFSA, if possible. Circumstances that might prevent the use of the IRS DRT are if an amended tax return is filed, or if there has been a change in marital status.

Student Aid Report

The Student Aid Report (SAR) is the output document from the FAFSA. The SAR provides a summary of the FAFSA data provided, the Expected Family Contribution (EFC), and the Data Release Number (DRN).

The SAR is ready in 3-5 business days after the FAFSA is submitted online, if the student provided an email address on the FAFSA. The SAR availability timeframe is extended to as long as two weeks if the student does not provide an email address or if signature pages need to be mailed.

The SAR can be accessed by logging in at studentaid.gov, using the student's FSA ID.

After receiving the SAR, whether online or by mail, the student and parents should review the information on the SAR for any items that need to be corrected. Corrections can be made by logging back in to the FAFSA. Any questions about whether corrections need to be made can be addressed to the financial aid office. Contact the financial aid office of the school where you hope to attend, or the financial aid office at any school near you. You do not have to be accepted or enrolled at a school in order to request help with FAFSA.

The FAFSA confirmation page and the SAR contain a Data Release Number (DRN) that can be provided to schools not listed on the FAFSA, to allow them to retrieve your FAFSA information.

Expected Family Contribution

A need analysis formula established by Congress determines a student's Expected Family Contribution (EFC); using information reported on the FAFSA.

The need analysis formula uses information from the FAFSA to determine the amount that the student and their family is expected to contribute towards the student's college education, which is called the EFC. Because it is based on family information, a student's EFC will remain the same regardless of the college they attend. Note that the EFC is not a set dollar amount that students will be expected to write a check for, instead, the EFC is a comparative measure of a family's ability to pay for education. The actual out-of-pocket cost may be more, less than, or equivalent to the EFC.

Financial Aid Offers

Once a student has been accepted at the college, the FAFSA has been completed, as well as other applications in the school's financial aid application process, the financial aid administrator will "package" all available aid options and send a financial aid offer (or award letter) for consideration. Because each college has its own packaging policy, the types of financial aid offered will probably vary from college to college, as well as the timeframe when the letter will be sent to the student. The financial aid offer may include a combination of financial aid programs from various sources, such as grants, scholarships, work-study, and student loans.

When reviewing financial aid offers, students should consider the amount of aid provided, the amount of loans in the package, and the remaining gap which, along with the EFC, constitutes the costs that the student and family will need to come up with to finance a college education.

The student may receive a College Financing Plan from the institution in addition to or as a part of the financial aid offer. The College Financing Plan is a consumer tool that is designed to simplify information that prospective students receive about costs and financial aid so that they can make informed decisions about which postsecondary institution to attend. The form can be viewed at https://collegecost.ed.gov/shopping\_sheet.pdf. The College Financing Plan ensures that families will have an easy-to-read form that enables them to compare institutions in terms of grant and scholarship amounts, net costs, graduation rates, loan repayment rates, media borrowing, and estimated monthly loan payments after graduation.

Financial Need

At each college, the financial aid office will calculate financial need by subtracting the EFC from the cost of attendance (COA). The EFC will be the same at each college, but the COA will differ from college to college.

The COA includes tuition and fees, room and board (whether or not the student lives on campus there are always costs for room and board), transportation, books and supplies, and personal expenses. Some of these costs may be billed directly by the university, such as tuition and fees, as well as room and board if the student lives on campus. Other costs are simply expenses that are related to being a college student, such as books and supplies, and transportation to and from the college.

The cost of attendance is used at each college to determine a student's financial need.

Keep this in mind:

- COA (varies by school)
- EFC (remains constant)
- Financial Need (varies by school)

Remember that there is no guarantee that a student's financial need will be entirely covered. In many cases, the college may not be able to meet 100% of a student's financial need. The difference between the cost of attendance and the amount of financial aid offered by the college is referred to as the gap, which the student and family will be responsible for paying.

Repayment

Repayment of a federal loan begins six months after the student ceases enrollment as at least a half-time student and usually extends up to 10 years. In certain situations, students may delay repayment by requesting a deferment, which is granted under a variety of conditions set forth in federal regulations. You may also ask your financial aid officer for additional information.

In addition, the federal government offers several repayment options based on your income and/or your financial situation. Contact your loan servicer to find out about these repayment options and to learn what best fits your situation.

Direct PLUS Loans for Parents

These loans are for parents of dependent students enrolled in undergraduate programs of study. Federal Direct PLUS Loans now require completion of the FAFSA and the determination of eligibility for the Federal Pell Grant or Federal Direct Stafford Loan. Also, parent borrowers must not have an “adverse credit history” as defined in federal regulations.

Repayment normally starts once funds are disbursed. However, parents may defer payments on a PLUS loan until six months after the date the student ceases to be enrolled at least half time. Interest must be paid monthly or quarterly, or capitalized quarterly.

Value: A parent may borrow up to the difference in the estimated cost of attendance and other received financial aid for each dependent student meeting the eligibility requirements.

Direct PLUS Loan Features

Parent and dependent student must be U.S. citizens or eligible noncitizens, not in default on any federal education loans nor owe an overpayment on a federal education grant, and must meet other general eligibility requirements for the Federal Student Aid programs.

- Available to parents of dependent undergraduate students
- Parent may borrow up to the cost of attendance minus any other aid received by the student.

IRS Publication 970

The Internal Revenue Service's Publication 970 entitled "Tax Benefits for Education" explains the tax treatment of various types of educational assistance, including scholarships, fellowship grants, and tuition reductions. Publication 970 can be found here: <https://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/p970.pdf>.

Two tax credits for which you may be eligible, as explained in the IRS Publication, are: (1) The American Opportunity credit, and (2) The Lifetime Learning credit.

Other types of benefits explained in the IRS Publication, which reduce the amount of income tax you may have to pay, are: (1) Deducting student loan interest; (2) Receiving tax-free treatment of a canceled student loan; (3) Deducting tuition and fees for education; (4) Receiving tax-free student loan repayment assistance; (5) Establishing and contributing to a Coverdell education savings account (ESA), which features tax-free earnings; (6) Participating in a qualified tuition program (QTP), which features tax-free earnings; (7) Taking early distributions from any type of individual retirement arrangement (IRA) for education costs without paying the 10% additional tax on early distributions; (8) Cashing in savings bonds for education costs without having to pay tax on the interest; (9) Receiving tax-free education benefits from your employer; and (10) Claiming a business deduction for work-related education. # The NC 529 Plan: North Carolina's National College Savings Program

The NC 529 Plan enables residents of any state to invest funds to be used to pay qualified education expenses in connection with attendance at an eligible college or university in any state, including tuition, fees, room and board, books, a computer, as well as trade schools, K-12 tuition, apprenticeships, and student loan payments.

The NC 529 Plan is designed to meet the requirements of a qualified tuition program under Section 529 of the Internal Revenue Code, allowing Participants to save with certain tax advantages, specifically:

- NC 529 Account earnings accrue free from federal income tax and, for North Carolina residents, from North Carolina state income tax when used for qualified education expenses.
- Funds held in a 529 account for the benefit of a student can have a minimal effect on financial aid eligibility determined under the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), depending on ownership of the account, family income and size of family, and timing of the qualified withdrawal.
- The value of a 529 plan owned by a dependent student's parent is considered a parent asset on the FAFSA and is used to help calculate the EFC. Generally, the first $10,000 in 529 assets will fall under the Asset Protection Allowance (the exact amount depends on the older parent's age). Any parental assets beyond that amount will reduce a student's aid package by up to a maximum of 5.64% of the asset's value.

For example, if a student completing the FAFSA is a beneficiary on a parent-owned 529 account with a value of $20,000, the first $10,000 would be excluded under the Asset Protection Allowance. The maximum consideration would be 5.64% of the $10,000 or an increase of $564 toward EFC.

Overall, most 529 plan assets held by parents and others will have a low impact. Additionally, depending on investment choices and market performance, the tax benefit on the earnings may outweigh the percentage of the asset attributed toward EFC as determined by the FAFSA.

NCSEAA is responsible for having established and continues to maintain North Carolina's National College Savings Program, also known as the NC 529 Plan. The North Carolina General Assembly established the Parental Savings Trust Fund, of which NCSEAA is trustee, to hold all assets of the Program. The NC 529 Plan is administered by College Foundation, Inc. (CFI), which serves as an agent of the NCSEAA.

For more information on the NC 529 Plan, visit CFNC.org/NC529.

Glossary

Academic Year – An academic year requires a minimum of 30 weeks of instructional time for a program that measures its length in credit hours or a minimum of 26 weeks of instructional time for a program that measures its length in clock hours. For an undergraduate program, a year is at least 24 semester or trimester hours, or 36 quarter hours for a course of study that measures its program length in credit hours or 900 clock hours for a course of study that measures its program length in clock hours. All programs must define an academic year that conforms to the minimum requirements even if the program itself is shorter than those minimum requirements.

Award Notification/Letter – An official notice, issued by the financial aid office, that lists all the financial aid awarded to the student. This communication may be online and generally provides the expected family contribution, cost of attendance, and the terms of the aid awarded.

Cost of Attendance (COA) – The total cost of an education, which is usually expressed as a yearly amount. COA includes tuition and fees, room and board, an allowance for books and supplies, transportation, and miscellaneous expenses, dependent care, study abroad expenses, disability expenses, employment expenses for co-op study and loan fees. The amount is determined by the financial aid office of the institution.

Dependent Student – For financial aid purposes, an undergraduate student is usually classified as a dependent and is expected to have access to parental financial resources if he/she is not married, does not have legal dependents, including children that he/she supports more than 50%, is not a veteran, is not currently serving on active duty (including National Guard or Reserves activated by Federal Authority) in the U.S. Armed Forces for purposes other than training, was not an orphan, ward of the court, or foster child at the age of 13 or any time thereafter, or is not an emancipated minor, in legal guardianship, or unaccompanied youth who is homeless or self-supporting and at risk of homelessness and under 24 years of age.

Expected Family Contribution (EFC) – Determined by a formula, this figure indicates how much of a family's financial resources are expected to help pay for the student's education. The EFC is used in determining eligibility for financial aid. Both FM (federal methodology) and IM (institutional methodology) use the EFC concept, although the calculated EFC under the two methodologies may differ.

FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) – The federal aid application that must be completed by students who want to be considered for federal and much state need-based aid.

Financial Aid Package – The total financial aid a student receives to meet educational expenses. It may include federal, state, and private aid such as grants, loans, work study, and scholarships.

Financial Need – The difference between the Cost of Attendance and the Estimated Family Contribution. It is used in determining what the student's aid package will be.

Forgivable Loan for Service – A form of financial aid that has a service and/or cash repayment obligation as a condition for receiving the funds. A student must promise to repay the money upon graduation or withdrawal from the program within a specified time period, either through service in a certain geographical and /or subject area or in cash at a predetermined interest rate.

Full-Time Student – For undergraduate students, this is usually a minimum of 12 semester hours of enrollment in a degree-granting program.

General Education Development (GED) Certificate – A certificate students receive if they've passed a specific, approved high school equivalency test. Students who don't have a high school diploma but who have a GED may still qualify for federal and state student aid.

Grace Period – Period of time when a borrower leaves school or drops below half-time and the borrower is not obligated to begin repayment of his/her loans – usually six or nine months.

Grant – Financial aid awarded on the basis of need or merit that the student is not obligated to repay.

Independent Student – Students who are independent do not have to provide parental information on the FAFSA. To be considered independent, students have to meet certain criteria, such as 24 years old, married, or a veteran or active duty military.

Interest – The charge made to a borrower for use of a lender's money.

IRS Data Retrieval Tool (DRT) – The DRT electronically transfers your federal tax return information into your FAFSA form.

Master Promissory Note – The legal document that a borrower must sign when he/she receives an educational loan that lists conditions under which the money is borrowed and the terms under which he/she agrees to repay the loan with interest.

North Carolina State Education Assistance Authority (NCSEAA) – The state agency in North Carolina that promotes access to higher education by administering financial aid and savings programs, informing students and families about paying for college, teaching educators about financial aid administration, and advocating for resources to support students. For more information, visit www.ncseaa.edu.

Origination Fee – A fee charged by the federal government and deducted from the loan before disbursement to offset part of the administrative costs of the William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan Program (DL).

Principal – The initial amount of the student loan. Interest is charged on this amount, and the origination fee is deducted from the principal prior to disbursement.

Priority Filing Deadline – The date by which a student needs to submit the FAFSA for priority consideration for state funds. These dates are set each individual college or university and are typically earlier than the federal deadline (June 30th). While students can submit the FAFSA later than this date, their award may be smaller if state funds have been exhausted.

Profile – A need-analysis form required by some institutions for non-federal aid and processed through the College Board’s College Scholarship Service (CSS). This form can be found at <https://cssprofile.collegeboard.org>.

Residency – To be eligible to be determined as a resident for tuition purposes and state financial aid (in-state tuition and state grants), a person must establish that his or her presence in the state is, and during the requisite 12-month qualifying period was, for the purposes of maintaining a bona fide domicile rather than of maintaining a mere temporary residence to enroll in an institution of higher education.

State law also allows military personnel and their dependents to qualify for in-state tuition while stationed in North Carolina.

For more information on residency, visit <https://ncresidency.cfnc.org>.

Satisfactory Academic Progress (SAP) – A student must be making satisfactory academic progress to continue receiving federal aid. Each institution develops its own satisfactory academic progress standards for financial aid eligibility.

Scholarship – A form of financial aid given to students on the basis of need or merit (or a combination of both) to help pay for their education expenses. Some scholarships have community service requirements and geographic, institutional or academic major restrictions. Most scholarships require the student to maintain satisfactory academic progress for renewal.

Scholarship-Loan – A form of financial aid that has a service and/or cash repayment obligation as a condition for receiving the funds. A student must promise to repay the money upon graduation or withdrawal from the program within a specified time period either through service in a certain geographical and /or subject area or in cash at a predetermined interest rate. Also known as a Forgivable Loan.

Student Aid Report (SAR) – A federal “output” document sent to a student by the Central Processing System. The SAR contains financial and other information reported by the student on the FAFSA. A student receives a paper SAR if he or she files a paper FAFSA and does not provide a valid email address. The student receives a link to online SAR information if he or she provides a valid email address on the FAFSA. The student’s Expected Family Contribution (EFC) is included on the SAR. All information reported on the SAR is also sent to schools the student listed on the FAFSA.

Subsidized Loan – A need-based loan on which the interest is paid by the federal government while the borrower is enrolled in school or during grace and deferment periods.

Unsubsidized Loan – A non-need-based loan for which borrowers are responsible for interest from the date the loan is disbursed.

Verification – A review process to determine the accuracy of the information on a student’s financial aid application. If a student is selected for verification, he/she is required to submit acceptable documentation to support information on his/her FAFSA application.

CFNC Info

College Foundation of North Carolina (CFNC) is a free service of the State of North Carolina. CFNC promotes access to North Carolina higher education and assists students with education and career planning.

Over twenty years ago, several North Carolina education organizations began a collaboration to create CFNC.org, where students and education professionals find free resources to plan, apply, and pay for college. Their work over the years has provided access to education for countless North Carolinians.

The service provides, in one place, the information North Carolina students and families need to prepare for a high-quality credential or a post-secondary degree. CFNC communicates through a single, one-stop resource that higher education is available and possible, creating more opportunities than ever to go to college.

Via CFNC.org, students can use a wide range of career exploration and planning tools, and maintain a personal dashboard as they explore more than 110 North Carolina colleges and universities and search scholarships with powerful filters. Students and families find help with submitting the Free Application for Federal Student Aid, or FAFSA, completing North Carolina's Residency Determination Service (RDS), and can apply online for college admission; as well as access financial planning, college savings, loan, and other grant and scholarship information.

North Carolinians can call CFNC toll-free at 866-866-CFNC (2362), where specialists in career counseling, academic advising, and financial resources for college stand by, ready to help. Students, families, and counselors are encouraged to call with individual questions or to request more information.

Families with young children are able to start early in their financial and academic planning for college. Families with high school students, or adults anticipating college enrollment, find that CFNC provides detailed guidance on both college admission and financial aid. Education professionals in high schools access tools such as reporting on their school's FAFSA filers, and tracking their students' progress with career planning milestones and specific college admissions steps.

CFNC Services in North Carolina

- CFNC accounts customized by students, parents, and education professionals to organize academic and other educational activities throughout middle and high school.
- Two contact centers (one for answering questions about paying for college and one for answering questions about careers, transcripts, and college admissions) provide specialists available via phone and email year-round to help students, parents, and educators navigate the college access process.
- Seven regional representatives located across the state who maintain expertise on college access issues, develop relationships with counselors to help them guide their students, and provide presentations in schools and to community groups on planning, applying, and paying for college.
- Two additional representatives who serve Spanish-speaking families and those whose questions about financial aid are unique, and whose barriers to a college education, whether language or citizenship status, merit specialized attention.
- An active application hub through CFNC.org for students to submit college applications and request electronic high school transcripts.
