A high-angle, top-down photograph of four young Black men arranged in a circle, looking up at the camera and smiling. They are all wearing hooded sweatshirts: one in blue, one in orange, one in light orange, and one in yellow. The background is a solid, bright yellow. The man in the blue hoodie is at the top, the man in the orange hoodie is on the right, the man in the light orange hoodie is at the bottom, and the man in the yellow hoodie is on the left. The man in the light orange hoodie has visible tattoos on his forearms. The overall mood is joyful and positive.
