

Andrew Ebert is a full time designer and clinician for the marching arts based out of Greenville, SC where he lives with his wife and son. He has a degree in secondary education from Western Michigan University.

Andrew grew up in Milford, MI and began his marching career with the Glassmen, where he marched for 4 seasons including time on Soprano and as Drum Major. Andy then moved to the Blue Devils where he aged out as a mellophone player.

After aging out in 2004, Andrew became a staff member at Carolina Crown. He was moved in to the role of Visual Caption head at age 24 for the 2007 season, a position that he held for five years. During his time as caption head, Crown went from 8th at DCI finals to 2nd in 3 years and has continued as a fan favorite in the activity. Andrew is currently the drill designer and caption supervisor for the Madison Scouts Drum Corps and the drill designer for the Troopers Drum Corps.

Andrew works as a drill designer for the fall marching band activity as well as the WGI indoor percussion activity. He has been privileged to work with programs that have achieved great levels of success including state championships, regional championships, and BOA Grand National Finalists. He has also had WGI Percussion finalists in A, Open, and World Class.
