Lesson Ideas

- I like to give this to my students on the first day of classes—it's the last thing they expect me to give to them. I teach in a high-school and so the kids cycle through all 8 of their classes in the first two days. Their heads must explode with all the information that gets given to them in those first few days. I like to wait until at least the second or third class until I go over class expectations and the course curriculum. (I often have several students transfer in / out in the first week so this saves me some paperwork.)
- Ask students to share some of their answers with someone they don't know... I usually ask them to share 4 answers and then find a new partner and share another four answers until they've shared most of them. (You can do this 4-5 times because there are 25 questions.)
- Do a survey of some of the answers and see if there are any patterns or trends.
- Ask students to pick one of their answers and turn it into a paragraph—they must explain their answer in a well-written paragraph.
- Ask students to make a collage of their answers using words, pictures from the internet, magazine pictures or original artwork.
- Play a snippet of the songs that each of the students got stuck in their head. (Tee hee.... this could be funny!)
- Do the survey yourself and be willing to share your answers with the class—they love getting to know me as much as I enjoy getting to know them.

I hope you have a wonderful school year!
