Banking 101

Relationships are like a bank account. With every single person that you know, you share an account. You can make a deposit in your relationship bank account by doing or saying a nice thing, or you can make a withdrawal by hurting them in some way.

Every relationship that we have is the result of the deposits and withdrawals that we've made over time in our relationship bank account.

Sometimes, small gestures make a big difference in relationships. If we want to build friendships, we have to focus on the little things. What are some things that friends do to make a deposit in your shared relationship bank account?
