Title: Vintage is in - get over it

Teens have been gravitating towards vintage and retro-inspired fashion, such as 80s & 90s-style graphic t-shirts, acid wash jeans, and band t-shirts. And some people (by people, I mean those over 30 years old), are making a fuss over this. Go online these days and you will read comments such as "If you can't name a song by a band, you shouldn't wear their shirt."

Whatever.

Retro-inspired is a "look". And that "look" is "in". There is no need to know a band's songs in order to wear a shirt. This is foolish. A person can wear a shirt with a Japanese or Chinese font & enjoy the look of that shirt. Sure, the shirt shouldn't say something foolish or inappropriate, but beyond that it doesn't matter what a shirt says. The font is the style. The same can be said of shirts with band names such as "Metallica" or "Smashing Pumpkins." It is not obligatory to know Metallica songs to wear a Metallica shirt - not in 2023. Vintage is a vibe. Get over it, people.
