

Business Board Games

1. Alibi -While playing this murder mystery game players use their skills of deduction and reasoning to make strategic decisions and solve the crime.
2. Anti-Monopoly -Unlike the traditional game in this version you learn about the implications of monopolies, the free market system, and how to stick it to “the man”.
3. Apples to Apples -By playing this game you will learn how to consider opponents points of view on different topics; great for developing you critical thinking skills.
4. Balderdash -Develop your creative thinking skills by writing down your own definitions to words that fool your opponents.
5. Battleship- In this game you try to not get your battleship sunk while learning about strategic planning, the laws of probability, and logic to sink your opponent's naval fleet.
6. Clue- To find out who committed the murder in the library with the lead pipe, you will gathering information to develop insights and make key management decisions to solve the crime.
7. Empire Builder -As you work to grow your railroad empire across the country, you’ll learn about business strategy, competitive advantages and entrepreneurship.
8. Gestures -Here you will develop your business presentation skills by thinking on your feet, expanding your vocabulary, and articulating delicate information to your teammate.
9. Hedbanz -Teaches you logical problem-solving and reasoning skills by trying to identify who or what you are in a fast-paced, time sensitive game for the whole family.
10. Jeopardy -This game teaches us that sometimes others know more about a subject than we do, a good thing to learn early in life.
11. Lords of Vegas -Strengthen your capital management skills of growing a casino in the high action, high risk, and high reward business world of Las Vegas.
12. Million Dollar Challenge -Buy low, sell high. This game teaches the principles of investing and trading as you develop your money management and decision-making skills.
13. Monopoly -Teaches you the importance of fiscal management, while developing negotiating skills, learning about getting a return on investment, and how to take calculated risks. As well as that nobody likes going to jail.
14. Pay Day -When playing this game you’ll learn about budgeting, cash flow analysis, how bank loans work, as well as the excitement we all get on pay day!
15. Risk -Key elements of learning here include international affairs, geography, and resource management as you attempt to conquer the world.

16. Sorry -Here you learn about statistical probabilities, develop a determined mindset, and learn how to say you're sorry; even if you don't really mean it.

17. Taboo

Learning how to work with people and think outside the box is a major part of this game. Don't say anything taboo while you're developing your communication skills.

18. The Farming Game

Farming isn't as easy as most people think. Here you'll learn a life lesson about the risks versus rewards decisions that farmers make when trying to grow their business.

19. The Game of Life

Play this game to learn about the value of a college degree, and how to make strategic decisions and see how each choice you make affects you and your family.

20. 30 Second Mysteries

Solve the mystery from different cases in history while refining your communication and negotiating skills to help your team come out on top.

21. The Diversity Game

Play this game to learn more about a diverse culture means a diverse workforce; valuing diversity means respecting individuals, valuing individual's leads to an effective workforce.