Why you should listen

Salman "Sal" Khan is the founder and chief executive officer of Khan Academy, a not-for-profit with a mission of providing a free, world-class education for anyone, anywhere.

Khan Academy started as a passion project in 2004. Khan's cousin was struggling with math, so he tutored her remotely and posted educational videos on YouTube. So many people watched the videos that eventually Khan quit his job at a hedge fund and pursued Khan Academy full time. Today Khan Academy has more than 100 employees in Mountain View, California. Khan Academy believes learners of all ages should have unlimited access to free educational content they can master at their own pace. Its resources cover preschool through early college education, including math, grammar, biology, chemistry, physics, economics, finance and history. Additionally, Khan Academy offers free personalized SAT test prep in partnership with the test developer, the College Board. More than 42 million registered users access Khan Academy in dozens of languages across 190 countries.

Khan has been profiled by "60 Minutes," featured on the cover of Forbes, and recognized as one of TIME's "100 Most Influential People in the World." In his book, The One World Schoolhouse: Education Reimagined, Sal outlines his vision for the future of education.

Khan holds three degrees from MIT and an MBA from Harvard Business School.

New York (CNN) — TikTok's biggest star, 16-year-old Charli D'Amelio is raking in money, and she's using some of it to invest in a banking app for teens.

D'Amelio — who earns an estimated $4 million a year from TikTok, according to Forbes — invested in teen banking app Step as part of its Series B funding round, a Step spokesperson told CNN Business.

Step is a mobile app that provides teens with an FDIC-insured bank account and a Visa card with no fees, according to the company. It allows parents to set guidelines for their children's spending, and users can send and receive money. The company says there is no minimum balance.

Step says it added several other celebrity investors, including Justin Timberlake and Eli Manning, in its latest funding round. "Prominent fintech executives from the likes of Facebook, Square, Venmo and Visa" also pitched in, according to a press release.

D'Amelio's huge social media fan base is part of a key demographic for Step. The dancer, who's endorsed the app on her accounts, boasts 100 million followers on TikTok, 34.5 million on Instagram and 4.9 million on Twitter.

About

I've been an entrepreneur from as long as I can remember. From opening my first fitness gym (that was unsuccessful) to publishing my first YouTube video back in 2008 I've learnt a lot along the way.

After my fitness gym failed I started an image consulting business to help men enhance their style, grooming, fashion, and most importantly their confidence. Along the way my wife got me a video camera that I had no idea at the time would change my life forever. Seeing the power of video, I've since spent many, many, years of providing content to my audience and became the top influencer on YouTube for men's fitness, lifestyle and grooming – a 5 million+ strong community.

Off the back of that success, I've launched multiple businesses including Tiege Hanley (www.tiege.com), Pete & Pedro (www.peteandpedro.com), ENEMY Sunglasses (www.enemy.com), Menfluent Media and more.

12 years later, I'm still posting daily.

Life & Business Lessons from the CEO of Wex Inc.

A lot of things in the world have been changed by Covid-19. The way organizations operate, the way employees connect with one another, and even the way leaders have to lead.

Melissa Smith, the CEO of Wex Inc., who is responsible for around 5,000 employees around the world says connecting with her people is more important now than ever before. And one important way she does that is through recognizing her people for what they do.

With the chaotic state of the world right now we need leaders who are courageous and empathetic. One leader who truly understands how to lead with both courage and empathy in these challenging times is Kate Johnson, the President of Microsoft US. Leaders can't just stay where they are comfortable anymore, they have to be willing to take a risk and own all the consequences. They have to be open, transparent, and vulnerable. They have a deep understanding of their people and their customers.
