

Benjamin

Boxer

Benjamin

Boxer

Benjamin

Clover

Boxer

Frederick

Boxer

Frederick

The animal largely responsible for building the windmill.

The animal who doesn't believe in the rebellion. He thinks life will be miserable on the farm, regardless of who is in charge.

The animal who looks forward to his 12th birthday so he can retire.

The animal who can read "as well as any pig" but thinks there was "nothing worth reading."

This character often goes to read the Seven Commandments painted on the wall, and blames herself for not remembering them "correctly."

The animal who notices and understands the ways that the pigs change the farm to oppress the animals, but does not oppose the pigs.

The character who plans and leads the blowing up of the windmill.

When this hard working animal can no longer work, Napoleon betrays him.

The character who cheats the animals out of the money for the wood.

Has two personal slogans: "I will work harder" and "Napoleon is always right."

Mollie

Napoleon

Mollie

Napoleon

Mr. Whymper

Napoleon

Muriel

Napoleon

Napoleon

Old Major

The pig who forces his way to power (through the military force of his dogs) and becomes the leader of Animal Farm after the revolution.

This animal likes the gifts of humans and is seen talking to them.

The pig who constantly fights with Snowball about the way Animal Farm should be run.

She deserted the revolution and ran to a nearby farm for sugar cubes and ribbons.

The animal who masterminds the oppression of the animals after the revolution that was supposed to liberate them.

The man who helps the animals interact with the human world.

This animal takes the puppies away from their mothers to "educate" them.

When Clover suspects that the pigs are breaking the Seven Commandments, Clover asks this character to read the commandments aloud.

The character who envisioned the rebellion, but died before it began.

The animal who is against the windmill from the start. But, who later takes credit for it.

Old Major

Squealer

The sheep

Snowball

Snowball

Snowball

Very persuasive pig; uses false statistics and lies to convince the animals to follow Napoleon.

The animal who teaches the others how to sing "Beasts of England."

Uneducated animals who repeat any slogan that they are taught, without thinking critically about what they are saying. They are easily manipulated.

After the rebellion, this pig is blamed for all that is wrong with Animal Farm.

The pig who envisioned it and was largely responsible for planning how it would be constructed.

The animal who leads the Battle of the Cowshed, but is later remembered as a someone who ran from battle.