Black History Month

Students will receive lessons on notable figures who have made black history. Students will connect the text to themselves, other texts and the world around them. Students will understand what black history means and how it has impacted their lives. Students will retell stories and share facts with one another. Students will also be encouraged to have dialogue with parents .

The Love of Reading

Our love for reading is on the rise! When students develop a love for reading, they become better readers, writers, and peer supporters. Parents are encouraged to spend at least 20 minutes a day reading with their children to display the importance of reading. Students who read daily become more fluent and their performance improves over time. Please take the time to read with your child each day.

What we're reading

Virtual E-Books & AR

Reading right at your fingertips!!!!

Students and families have access to thousands of free E-books or Electronic Books. Here are a few links to sites that we will use this year for reading and taking AR Quizzes.

myON: Students can log into their Clever accounts to access audio books on their reading level.
