"We didn't exactly try. We just stopped trying to prevent it and it happened. I've barely begun processing it. The tests came back positive, but it didn't feel real. So I went to the doctor on Friday and it's definitely real. The due date is December 5th. That feels really real. But other than that, nothing feels different. It's like this unreal thing that's happening to me. I am drinking decaf coffee right now. So that's different."

"I work twelve hours a day as a patient care technician. I don't treat myself like I should. But today's my day off. So I'm trying to take care of myself. I got my nails done. I'm on the way to church. I've been singing along to my gospel and reggae. There's no need to be in tune when you're praising God. I've been singing and crying and laughing to myself. No crazy people bothered me on the train today. They think I'm one of them. I'm covered."

"My daughter's personality started changing when she turned seven. She began to gain weight. She acted out in school. She grew more defiant. My mother had died around that time, and they had been close, so I assumed that maybe it had something to do with that. She'd always tell me that she hated her stepfather. He was strict with her, but I thought that was a good thing. And he treated me so well. He was the fucking perfect husband. My daughter finally told me when she was twelve years old. We'd just

“Two days ago at school we learned how to play a game called chest. You have horses and pawns and bishops and castles, and you’re supposed to steal other peoples’ places by squirting your pawn diagonal and eating their pieces. If anyone else wants to learn chest, I’ll teach them.”

“I didn’t start running until I was 51 years old. As I walked around the park, I’d always see these runners out there. So I decided to give that a try. After a year, I tried to run a marathon. I hit a wall at the 20-mile mark, but then I threw up, and then I found the energy to finish.

I ran 16 marathons in 17 years, until my doctor told me that I had to stop because of my heart. After that, I started walking 10 miles a day.

Now I’m 91 and I’m still more confident than I ever was when I was younger.”

"I work for a plumbing company. You probably wouldn't guess by looking at me, but I talk about toilets all day long. I mainly work in sales. But if the toilets are broken, I'll handle that too. You should see the reaction I get from a group of guys when I tell them that I'm here to fix the toilets."

“We’re kinda trying to make an igloo but we’re not sure how to make the roof.”

- “He’s my nephew. I watch him two or three days a week while my sister is at work. Last night we went to see a play and today we’re just running errands. It’s nice to be an uncle because I can enjoy his company without feeling the burden of providing for him. We have a lot of fun...”

“I emigrated from Liberia at the age of 18, and a lovely Jewish family took me in and helped fund my education. Their names were Anne and William Rothenberg. They had never even met me before. But they allowed me to live with them and introduced me to everyone as their daughter. They would never explain beyond that—it was always just ‘our daughter.’ It was so fun to see the confusion on people’s faces. They’ve both passed away. But a few years ago I started a scholarship fund for Liberian children, and I named it after them.”

BIRMINGHAM, AL: **Please Share!!** We don't know the reason why 8 year old Gabriel ended up at a rural Alabama shelter, but we do know that he now needs a home! Gabriel had arrived at the shelter with heartworms (a very preventable disease that can be serious if not treated) and hip issues, which is suspected to be why he was let go by someone. The good news is that Gabriel is now fully cleared of heartworms, on arthritis supplements and ready to find his best life ever. (Bon... See More

“My parents were teenagers when they had my brother and me. My mother abandoned us early on. My father told us she was manic-depressive. I remember going to the library with my brother when I was 9 or 10, trying to find out what ‘manic depressive’ meant. Mom came in and out of our lives over the next few years. She never stayed long. My father wasn’t much better. My brother and I had to raise ourselves. School was my only outlet. I was the first from my family to go to college. Now I’m a college counselor for low-income students. I don’t talk to either of my parents. My mom sends me texts every once in awhile, but I don’t answer.”

Photo Challenge

Inspiration: Humans of New York by Brandon Stanton

Purpose: To practice portrait composition and photo editing

TEKS/Student Expectations:

- Recognize composition principles and their impact on photography.[1B]
- Create digitized images using technology to complete the process.[2J]
- Improve print quality by using appropriate equipment or technology.[2K]

- Due date: 4/12 (next 6 wks)
- With what: phone, iPad or digital camera

- Like Brandon Stanton stops ordinary people walking around New York streets, you will stop a random stranger on the Midway campus.
- Introduce yourself as a photography student and ask if you may take a photo (tell them why).
- Photograph your subject any way you choose: standing, sitting, posing, alone, with a friend.... any way!
- Get a quote from your subject (see other side of the page for interview ideas). Also get his/her grade level.
- Edit your photo so that your subject's quote is on top of the photo with his/her name and grade.

- (1/7) “My parents weren’t direct. My mother was a housewife, not a scientist. But I was determined to go through my own personal journey. I got the third highest score in the entrance exams in the evenings to pay for my education. I was being given constant encouragement from university at the top of my class. I was given a scholarship to pursue my PhD. I suffered for my dream. I gave everything. If I had 100 liras, I would spend it on a book. My ultimate goal was to become a great scientist and make a lasting contribution to humanity.”

- “My husband worked 15 hours as a smuggler put me on a boat. I wanted to go home to get a refund. The deck was filled with people. The captain told me we hit a rock, but the boat didn't stop. The boat hit the compartment. Everyone begged for help. My husband pulled me out of the jacket and gave me a blanket. After several hours he told me he was too tired to swim and that he was going to float on his back and rest. It was so dark we could not see. The waves were high. I could hear him calling me but he got further and further away. Eventually a boat found me. They never found my husband.” (Kos, Greece)

I imagined that one day I’d get to a place where I can do the research that I want to do. But I’m seeing now that it’s more about doing the research that will get funded. “
