

The Places Parts of a Pencil Come From:

All the parts of your pencil have come from different places around the world. The raw materials have been imported to the U.S.A. from Brazil, Mexico, Sweden, South Africa, Kazakhstan, Estonia, Thailand, Malaysia, China and Mozambique. It is really amazing that something you use everyday comes from so many interesting places. If you look at the map on the other side of the paper, you can see what products were made in that country. With this project, I could really see how our world works together to help one another. The graphite, the wood, the paint, the rubber and the metal all have been on planes or ships to get here and made in a factory here in America. It still shows how Global Interdependence works.

Global Interdependence

You wouldn't believe that you are holding parts of the world!
