NOTES & QUOTES

Principal's Message, Andrew Greene

I hope you are having a productive year and are gearing up for the winter break. As you may know, the second semester has begun, which means we have started our scheduling process for next year. The guidance counselors will be going into math classes to review course selections and other pertinent information. Students will be coming home with a worksheet that parents should review with their children. Student's schedules will not be finalized until parents sign off on the course selection worksheet.

On the State assessment front, eighth grade students recently completed the ELA test as well as the lab practicum for the 8th grade science test. The results of these tests will be sent to us in approximately five to six weeks. The remaining State assessments for 8th grade students will take place from March through June. More information on the specific timelines will be sent out early in the spring.

As a reminder, students need to be very careful with any personal items that they bring into school. For example, some students bring in their I-Pods to listen to music at lunch. The school, however, is not responsible for safeguarding these kinds of electronic devices. Please talk with your children about the need to keep track of all of their belongings.

Starting on February 10, we will be implementing "You've Gotta Have A Heart Week". This week is designed to enhance school spirit, as well as to focus on the character education program we have instituted at Candlewood. Ask your children to tell you about the events we have planned!

Finally, I want to thank the PTA for the wonderful work they do on behalf of the students at Candlewood. Through their efforts, we have been able to bring quality programs to our students.

Hopefully, we will not have any more winter storms to contend with!

February 2005

Special points of interest:

- ✓ All the latest District and building news can be accessed on our web site — hhh.k12.ny.us
- ✓ The PTA Arts in Education programs were a huge success.
- ✓ Black History Month activities are on-going.
- ✓ Spirit Week to occur the second week in March.

Early Dismissal:

In an effort to minimize disruptions to classes, parents are asked to send notes for early dismissal. Have your child bring the note to school, show it to his/her teacher at the time to be picked up, and report to the main office at the designated time. This will eliminate the need to interrupt everyone's classroom activities when sending for a student. Thank you for your help with this.

From the Candlewood PTA

History Tellers Project

In an interdisciplinary project that combined research and story-writing skills, Team 7-6 learned firsthand how challenging it is to be an historical fiction writer. The "History Tellers Project" spanned several weeks as the students worked in the library and computer lab researching a particular event from the seventh grade social studies' timeline. First, students had to choose an event and setting that interested them. Ms. Maher and Ms. Sandberg helped students narrow down topics and provided historical expertise for the project. After learning how to access resource information, students—aided by

Ms. Mjos and Mrs. Dougherty—wrote an original historical fiction story combining historical facts and fiction writing to capture a moment in history. Stories had to incorporate essential elements of fiction, including: characterization, conflict, plot, dialogue, setting, climax and theme. Mini-lessons such as writing effective and correctly punctuated dialogue helped students problem-solve how to combine history and fiction. After hours of writing, editing, and last-minute research, students walked away with original stories that would make John Jakes proud! From the Salem witch trials to the War of 1812 to the Battle of Gettysburg, students brought to life original tales of America's past. Students shared excerpts with their classmates and reflected on all they learned during the project, which culminated with an Author's Tea celebrating the students' efforts.

You've Gotta Have Heart Week

"You've Gotta Have Heart" Week — February 10 to February 17 — is dedicated to character education and bully prevention within Candlewood Middle School. Some of the events planned include an assembly program entitled "Put Yourself in Their Shoes", a Valentine's Day Candygram sale to raise money for tsunami victims, a door decorating contest, "Have a Heart of Gold Compliment Day", and lessons conducted within advisory. Students, as well as faculty, will participate in these events. Special thanks to the students from Peer Listeners, Helping Hands, and the Seventh Grade Officers, as well as to the members of the Character Education Committee: Alaina Fierstat, Lisa LoPiano, Denise DiBiasi, Tatum McNierney, Heather McLaughlin, Cathy Colli-gan, Antoinette Waldner, Debbie Gosse, Adam Stern, Melissa Reynolds and Larry Genovese.

"Along with academic rigor, character education is a critical component of effective middle schools."

Hoops and Jump Rope for Heart

On March 22 and 23, the Health and Physical Education Departments will be sponsoring the Hoops and Jump Rope for Heart event. All students will participate during their physical education classes. This important event helps students become more aware of how important exercise is in the reduction of heart disease — the number one killer of Americans! You can help by sponsoring your child to raise funds for the American Heart Association. The Boys and Girls Leaders

Hoops and Jump Rope for Heart—March 22 and 23

Clubs will be helping during this event. They have become an important asset in helping to run this event smoothly.

Adopt a Soldier Campaign

Candlewood's Resource Room students have been participating in an "Adopt a Soldier Campaign." Mrs. Gosse's and Mrs. Katz's students spent time writing letters and poems to help cheer up a former Candlewood student, Lance Corporal Chris Xanthos, who is a Marine currently stationed in Iraq. The students and their families donated several care-package items, including such things as phone cards, Chapsticks, T-shirts, writing paper, medicated foot powder, toi-lety items, popcorn and other microwaveable foods. Fifteen large boxes were carefully packed, sealed and mailed from the local post office in time for the holiday season.

Students were enthusiastic about participating in this project, where they were able to express their appreciation for the sacrifice of a fellow member of Candlewood's extended family. Our eagerly awaited response from Chris arrived at Candlewood at the end of January. A detailed thank you note from Chris on behalf of his entire platoon confirmed that the many letters and packages were received. Chris also indicated that he is expecting to return home by mid-March and would love to visit Candlewood to share his photographs and discuss his experiences in Iraq. We are all looking forward to his return and will be planning a special "welcome home" celebration for Chris in the Resource Room.

Candlewood Poets

Earlier this school year, students from Ms. Mjos and Mrs. Lennon's English classes entered a poetry contest for young poets from New York. Numerous Candlewood students were chosen to have their poems published in A Celebration of Young Poets. Congratulations to 6th grader Gabrielle Costa and 7th graders Tara Blumstein, Kimberly Brazier, Nicolle Costa, Matthew Deutsch, Ariana Farahani, Lauren Fialkoff, John Fulgoni, Samantha Hartnett, Ali Juliano,

Jamie Kantrowitz, Kathleen Keogh, Esther Kim, Victoria Maniscalco, Lukas Mikelinich, Lauren Pavlat, Eric Princiotta, Kristin Princiotta, Bianca Rebozo, Jessica Rivetz, Christina Stuart, Bessie Weisman and Jordan Wilner

Parents: How to Help When You Don't Know How

Reprinted from "FOCUS REVIEW"

Let's face it: Helping kids with their math and science schoolwork can be tricky. Who of us remembers everything we learned in school? Plus, these days what kids are learning and doing is different from what we did. Figuring out how to help your kids can be downright frustrating. And yet, research strongly suggests that parental involvement in education has an enormous impact on student learning.

What's a parent to do?

First, don't panic. Second, don't give up. And third, take a look at some of the materials available online at www.enc.org/focus/howtohelp/:

"That's Not the Way I Learned It!"

Read how math and science instruction has changed, how parents like you struggle with math and science content, and how one parent discovered a valuable source of help with her daughter's math homework.

"General Help"

What are the national science and math standards, and why do they matter? What are some ways that you as a parent can help your child with science and math homework? This section includes resources that can help you answer those questions.

"Math Help"

Your child is probably doing more than worksheets and lists of problems. Math learning is a lot more hands-on these days. To help you help your kids, we've provided a list of useful math references and guides.

"Science Help"

Things are changing all the time in science, and it's hard to remember everything that your kids are asking you to help them with. Here, we provide materials that range from news on current events in science to resources that address specific science content areas.

Ten Resolutions for Parents in 2005

1. Come together for a family meal as many times a week as possible. Let the answering machine do its job and make sure the TV is off.
2. Notice the small steps and the good efforts your child makes. Don't overvalue the final product, which can serve to discourage a child from trying.
3. Apply this same generous attitude toward yourself and other family members.
4. Avoid asking too many questions. Questions often make children feel quizzed, attacked and/or invaded. Make statements and observations instead.
5. Listen carefully to your children. Try to understand where they are coming from — what are their wishes and concerns — and how it is that they see a situation.
6. Be clear in your own mind what are your expectations. Then let children know clearly and calmly, in advance whenever possible, what these expectations are.
7. Promote laughter with your child. Have fun and good times in the family. Cultivate your own sense of humor.
8. Pay attention to each other. FOCUS. Listen with both ears and let your children know when you can't listen or pay attention to them.
9. Beware of overscheduling and filling every minute with "productive" activity. Create blocks of time for just hanging out and being there. These are the times that children will remember with fondness.
10. Make time for the things that give YOU pleasure — that nurture and nourish you mentally, physically and emotionally. Your well-being is crucial to your family.

Happiness and Life Satisfaction in Children and Adolescents, by Dr. Jeffrey Froh, Candlewood Psychologist

Negative symptomology (e.g., anxiety and depression) and positive psychological health (e.g., happiness and life satisfaction) operate independently of each other. That is, the absence of social-emotional difficulty does not equate to optimal functioning. Research continues to show that happiness is both a protective factor against emotional maladies (e.g., stress, and depression) and a predictor of a high quality of life (e.g., positive and supportive relationships, goal attainment, and good overall health).

To this end, a lesson plan focusing on happiness and life satisfaction was created. The objective was for the students to gain a self-awareness of their current level of self-reported life satisfaction, as well as to learn specific strategies for the enhancement of life satisfaction. My ultimate goal is to foster the positive psychological health of all of our students. As such, I am currently increasing my knowledge base so as to create other positive psychology lesson plans (i.e., forgiveness, gratitude, meaning, hope and optimism).

The teachers of team 7-5 extend their sincere thanks and appreciation for the help of the students and parents during our tsunami relief effort. The brownies, cookies, cupcakes and muffins you baked helped make our effort a success. Thanks to the Bernstein family's donation of 500 plastic bracelets, we were able to raise additional money through their sale. Ultimately, the team raised over two thousand dollars, as a result of your generosity and hard work.

Not only did team 7-5 raise money for those who are in need, but they also demonstrated how well their team can work together toward a goal. All of the students of team 7-5 showed their empathy for the tsunami victims and their dedication to helping them by selling bracelets, making baked-goods, or simply buying (and eating) some of those delicious cookies! Again, we thank the Candlewood community for its kindness and hard work.

Ms. Kann, Mr. Krautheimer, Ms. Lowery, Ms. West

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

In honor of Black History month, Candlewood's Team 7-6 recognized the achievements of several African-Americans who contributed to the Civil Rights Movement in America. In Ms. Mjos's and Mrs. Dougherty's English classes, students were asked what qualities successful people shared. Then students read excerpts from the autobiographies of Malcolm X and Jackie Robinson. We envisioned Malcolm X fighting against his own lack of education as he used a dictionary to teach himself how to read. We pictured the tremendous obstacles that enabled Jackie Robinson to become the first African-American major league baseball player to play on an integrated league. Students compared and contrasted the qualities that enabled these pioneers to become role models and leaders in the Civil Rights movement. Students compared and contrasted views of Malcolm X to those of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s views about how to achieve equality for all people. Students also read and closely analyzed Dr. King's "I Have a Dream" speech, paying close attention to Dr. King's mastery of persuasive language. Finally, students were asked to write whether they believed Dr. King's dream had finally come true and what they would do personally to achieve that dream. Goals for the unit were not just to learn more about these African-American heroes, but to be able to read, write, listen, and speak about them clearly and expressively.

STUDENT RECOGNITION

Candlewood Middle School strives to provide all our students with a sensitive, nurturing, and supportive learning environment. We are committed to helping each student reach his/her full potential by creating a vigorous and positive middle school experience. Our students are offered a comprehensive academic program with many opportunities to develop a wide variety of interests.

The students listed on the following pages are proudly recognized for outstanding academic achievement during the second quarter of the 2004-2005 school year.

Candlewood Middle School is very proud of its honor roll students. Making honor roll marks a level of achievement, hard work, and success that should be both recognized and commended. At Candlewood all grades are weighted the same; however, only those students who handed in a "Grade Inclusion Form" have their Physical Education grade included in their GPA. A student must achieve a GPA of 4.0 ("A") or above to be included on High Honor Roll, and a GPA of 3.5 to 3.9 ("B") or above to be included on Honor Roll.

We would also like to recognize the students selected for our "Wall of Recognition":

Yoseph Ahmad, Ryan Barbaccia, Daniel DePaola, Marisa DeRosa, Dana Einsidler, David Grossman, Lauren Healy, Nicholas Kontos, Justin Maharaj, John Makowski, Michael Myones, Perri Rumstein, Brianna Schiotis, Garrett Schultz, Abraham Sleiman, Scott Sommer, and Jessica Southard. These students are being recognized for displaying good citizenship and kindness to their fellow Candlewood students.
