Writing Workshop Model

The writing workshop model has proven to be a very effective way to teach writing in elementary school. Writing workshop allows for a time of modeling by the teacher as well as plenty of time for independent writing for your students. This is the structure for writing workshop that your lesson plans will include:

Mini-lesson (5-15 minutes)

- Teach a writing skill.

Modeling (5-10 minutes)

- Model how to use the writing skill.

Writing Time (20-40 minutes)

- Students work independently on their writing.
- Teacher conferences with students.

Sharing Time (5-10 minutes)

- Students share their writing with others.

Six Traits of Writing

The six traits of writing model has also proven to be very effective for teaching writing at the elementary level, which is why it has been integrated into these lessons. Each lesson focuses on a specific trait of writing: ideas, organization, voice, word choice, sentence fluency, or conventions.

The Writing Process

The writing process is a series of steps taken by writers to produce a published work. The five stages include prewriting, drafting, revising, editing, and publishing. Throughout this unit, students will move through these five stages for two writing assignments.

Stoplight Writing

The stoplight writing approach helps students to organize their writing by providing visual cues. Students' organizers will include: green circles which mean "go" and write your beginning (and ending); yellow circles which mean "slow down" and write your main ideas; and red circles which mean "stop" and give more details about your main ideas.

Conferencing

Conferencing is an essential part of effective writing instruction because students need specific feedback of what they are doing well in their writing and how they can improve. Each lesson plan includes a time to conference with individual students.

Tips for the Mini-lesson and Modeling

1. Classroom setup: It is helpful to do the mini-lesson and modeling portion of the lesson at a common area where students can see the board or easel clearly.
2. Practice routines: It is helpful to model and practice how to sit and quietly listen to mini-lessons and how to participate.
3. Mentor Text: Each writing unit is centered on two mentor texts of the same writing genre. It would be best to find a hard copy of the mentor texts before teaching the unit. If you cannot find one, you can probably find a read aloud version online, such as on YouTube.
4. Think-alouds: While modeling writing, it is very helpful to think aloud as you apply writing skills. This allows for your students to notice your thought processes as you write.
5. Make mistakes: While modeling writing, it is helpful to not always model your best writing. In fact, it is helpful to make mistakes so you can model how to revise and edit your writing in the revising and editing stages.
6. Writing samples: This unit includes sample graphic organizers and drafts to provide you with an example of how to model writing assignments.
7. Equipment: When modeling how to use graphic organizers and drafts, you may find it easiest to use a document camera to project them. If you do not have access to a document camera, you can model these on chart paper.

Tips for Student Writing and Sharing Time

1. Practice routines: It is important to teach and practice each routine that you will be using in your writing workshop. This will prepare your students to work independently as you conference with students. Here are some of the routines you may need to practice:
 - How and where to get writing materials (pencils, draft paper, etc.)
 - What to do when you are finished writing (read it over, free write, etc.)
 - How to stay on task and write the whole time (set timers, create goals, etc.)
 - How to share with a partner or group during sharing time (listen and respond)
 - How to put away writing materials (put papers neatly in writing folder)
2. Use writing folders: It is helpful to have writing folders for your students to store all of their graphic organizers and drafts for the unit. When a unit is complete, students can add their writing to their writing portfolio, which can simply be another folder.
3. Encourage students to use every other line: For the drafting stage, you may want to encourage your students to write on every other line to allow space for adding and changing words in the revising and editing stages.
4. Encourage independent spelling: It is important to encourage students to use resources that are available to them when attempting to spell difficult words. They may use word walls, sound walls, books, or decoding strategies (chunking, stretching out, etc.) to help them spell.
5. Free writing: When students are finished with a daily assignment, you can have them free write about a topic of their choice.

Grammar Skills

- You may notice that this unit does not include grammar skills. I have a separate grammar curriculum that includes 5-day lessons for 30 grammar skills. Each 5-day lesson consists of five 10-15 minute mini-lessons that can be taught before your daily writing lesson. You can find more information about this grammar curriculum on page 16.

TEACHER DIRECTIONS

1. Print your daily lesson plan on page 6.
2. Read the "Materials" section of your lesson plan and prepare the necessary materials:
 - Find a hard copy or YouTube read aloud of the mentor text: I Love Insects by Lizzy Rockwell.
 - Print the posters (pages 7, 9).
 - Print and make student copies of the graphic organizer (page 11).
3. Use the lesson plan to teach your lesson.

MINI-LESSON
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Gather students and explain that in this unit they will learn how to write an opinion essay. Have students share their prior knowledge about opinion writing.• Show the Opinion Writing youtube video to help your students understand opinion writing.• Read through the Opinion Writing poster. Discuss the definition and characteristics of opinion writing.• Read aloud I Love Insects to students. Discuss the opinions that the characters have in the book.• Explain that today we will begin writing our own opinion essay. Explain that good writers always prewrite before they write. Explain the prewriting stage with The Writing Process poster.
TEACHER MODELING
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Project your Brainstorm organizer. Explain that the first thing you need to do is brainstorm topics for your opinion essay. Explain that one of the best ways to do this is to think about some of your favorite things because you are likely to have a strong opinion about them. Model how to use the organizer to brainstorm topics that you have a strong opinion about.• Ask your students to help you select which opinion to write about. Perhaps you could have your class vote for the topic that they want you to write about. Circle the topic you plan to write about.
WRITING TIME
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Distribute the Brainstorm organizer to students. Ask students to brainstorm and record some of their favorite topics that they have a strong opinion about.• Conference with individual students as the class works on their writing.
SHARING TIME
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Pair students. Ask partners to share their Brainstorm organizer with one another and to help each other select a topic for their opinion essay.• Ask students to circle the topic they plan to write about on their Brainstorm organizer.• Invite a few students to share what they worked on today and provide them with positive feedback. (Optional: You may want to put their work under a document camera.)
