DakotaLink

<https://www.dakotalink.net/>

DakotaLink is a statewide program connecting South Dakotans to assistive technology devices and services. They provide general information and also training for specific devices. They can help families identify the best device for an individual situation. They even demonstrate or even loan technological devices, so that people have a good idea of how well something might work prior to obtaining it. For individuals who are ready to purchase assistive technology, DakotaLink can provide information about state agencies and organizations that often help to provide funding.

Department of Social Services

<http://dss.sd.gov>

Local DSS offices coordinate State programs, such as child support, child protection services, economic assistance, and Medicaid. As such, they have an excellent knowledge of the particular resources available to any local community. Part of their work includes overseeing cases for adoption and foster care. DSS would be a good contact for questions about accessing other State and Federal programs.

Disability Rights South Dakota

<http://www.drdsdlaw.org/>

Disability Rights South Dakota (formerly known as South Dakota Advocacy) is a federally-funded protection and advocacy agency serving the interests of disabled people in South Dakota. If there should be any conflict with a public school district, they can help to navigate the procedural remedies available through IDEA or to negotiate other resolutions.

Division of Developmental Disabilities

<https://dhs.sd.gov/developmentaldisabilities/default.aspx>

The Division of Developmental Disabilities (DDD) provides a number of services specifically for individuals who have more severe kinds of disabilities. Their intervention and support specialists can help to connect families with other available resources. For older students, they often attend IEP meetings to help transition clients to adult services. DDD also helps to establish conservatorship or guardianship for situations in which that is appropriate. They even have a program to offer respite care for caregivers.
