

Parent Training: Understanding the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation (OVR)

Empowering Students for Future Employment
Presented by: Dr. Laurel Keegan, Special Education
Director, Southern Fulton School District

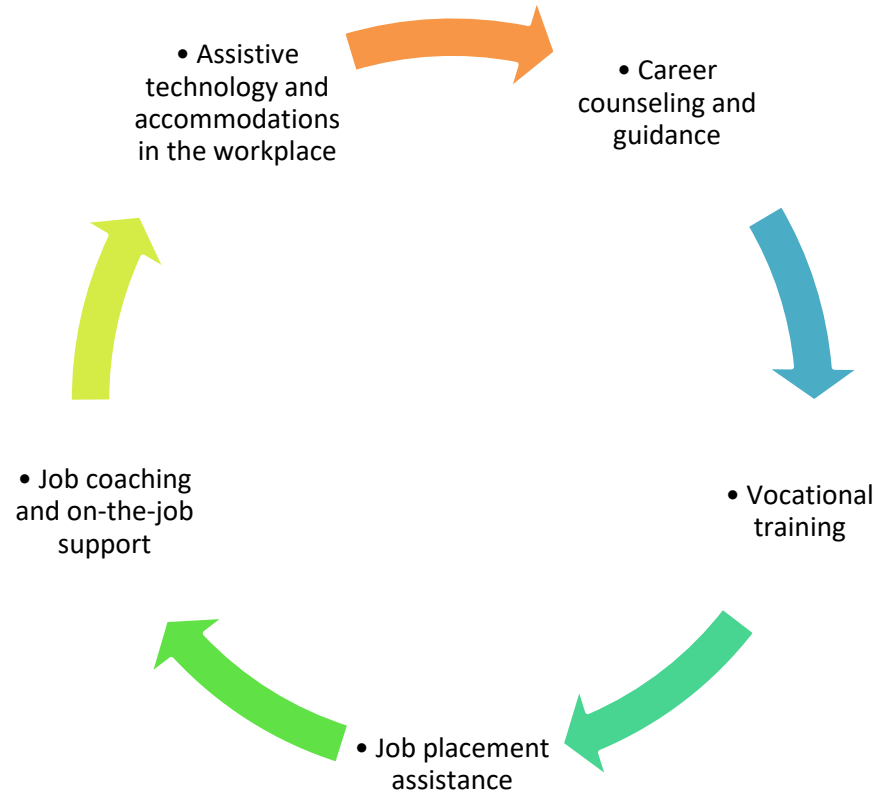

What is the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation (OVR)?

- OVR helps individuals with disabilities prepare for, obtain, and maintain employment.
 - Services are designed to support students in their transition from school to work.

Eligibility for OVR Services

- Students with a documented disability that affects their ability to work may qualify for OVR services.
- The student must be of transition age, typically 14 years and older.
- An evaluation will determine the specific supports and services needed.

Services Provided by OVR

The Role of the Transition Counselor

- Transition counselors work with students, families, and schools to develop individualized plans.
- They help assess the student's strengths, interests, and career goals.
- Counselors connect students with the resources they need to succeed in the workforce.

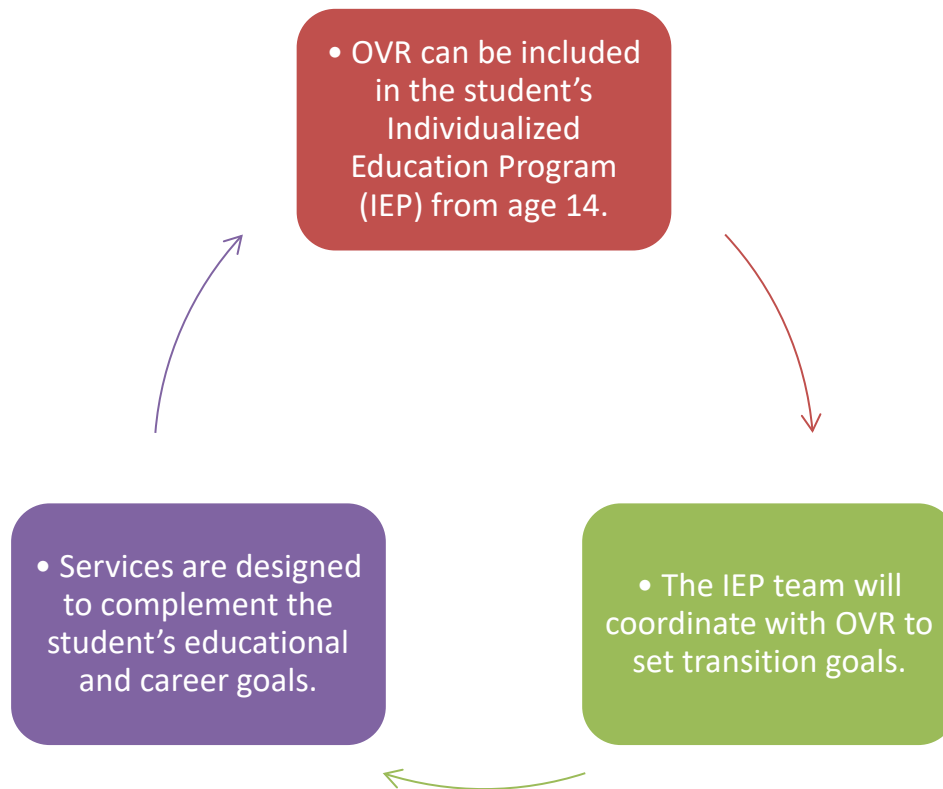

How to Apply for OVR Services

- Referrals can be made by parents, teachers, or the student themselves.

- Contact your local OVR office to schedule an intake appointment.

- The intake process will include evaluations and assessments to determine eligibility.
