WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT ME

- Habitat:

Northern Australia and South East Asia
(including coastline)

- Food:

Wildebeest, Zebras, Giraffes, other crocodiles, birds, people, elephants, sharks, fish, and anything else in the water that looks like food

- Size

At birth, saltwater crocodiles are no more than eight inches long. An adult male can grow to be 22 feet long, and 4,400 pounds. Females typically grow to be 17 feet long, but only 2,200 pounds.

- Identification

The scientific name for the saltwater crocodile is Crocodylus porosus.
One of the biggest identifiers is the long more pointed snout. Alligators have a shorter, more rounded snout.

FUNCTION:

- They are the largest reptile on earth
- The Saltwater Crocodile is a very important consumer due to the range of what it eat and its ability to eat anything
- They are overhunted for their skin
