Monroe Township Schools

Mission and Goals

Mission

The mission of the Monroe Township School District, a unique multi-generational community, is to collaboratively develop and facilitate programs that pursue educational excellence and foster character, responsibility, and life-long learning in a safe, stimulating, and challenging environment to empower all individuals to become productive citizens of a dynamic, global society.

Goals

To have an environment that is conducive to learning for all individuals.

To have learning opportunities that are challenging and comprehensive in order to stimulate the intellectual, physical, social and emotional development of the learner.

To procure and manage a variety of resources to meet the needs of all learners.

To have inviting up-to-date, multifunctional facilities that both accommodate the community and are utilized to maximum potential.

To have a system of communication that will effectively connect all facets of the community with the Monroe Township School District.

To have a staff that is highly qualified, motivated, and stable and that is held accountable to deliver a safe, outstanding, and superior education to all individuals.

INTRODUCTION, PHILOSOPHY OF EDUCATION, AND EDUCATIONAL GOALS

Philosophy

The goal of the Monroe Township High School Language Arts program is to develop and to enhance students' ability to communicate effectively for varied purposes and audiences. Probably the single most important attribute of academic and career success, effective communication is based on the components of reading, writing, speaking, listening, and thinking.

A successful high school English program develops these components through an integrated approach to the language arts. This includes instruction in and practice of the support skills underlying each of these processes. For example, in the writing component, students write regularly, in a variety of modes and for a variety of audiences, using writing activities designed to appeal to students' interests and needs. Students learn strategies for prewriting and revising – in essence, skills for critical thinking such as analysis, synthesis, problem-solving and evaluation. They also share their writing with others and keep records of their writing development and samples of their writing in a portfolio. Frequent formal and informal assessment of the student's writing provides the teacher, the student and the parent with information about the student's areas of strength and the areas that need improvement.

Reading and writing about literature become increasingly more important as students develop the sophisticated skills of analysis and interpretation. By the time they complete their senior year, students will have read significant works of American, British and World literature. They also will have learned to express themselves in all of the rhetorical modes and to conduct independent research.

Educational Goals

This course offers students an opportunity to investigate who they are as individuals and as members of society. Through examination and analysis of short stories, fiction, poetry, and various arts and media genres in the context of popular culture, students will engage in reading, self-reflection, and creative expression. At the end of this course, students will have a better understanding of themselves, their avenues to self-discovery, and the influence of popular culture on literature, society, and their own lives.

This course satisfies the second part of the twelfth grade Language Arts requirement for graduation.

New Jersey State Department of Education Core Curriculum Content Standards

A note about Language Arts Literacy Standards and Cumulative Progress Indicators.

The New Jersey Core Curriculum Content Standards for Language Arts Literacy were revised in 2004 to include the five general standards of reading, writing, speaking, listening, and viewing and media literacy, along with specific strands and cumulative progress indicators for each. The Cumulative Progress Indicators (CPI's) referenced in this curriculum guide refer to these new standards and may be found in the Curriculum folder on the district servers. A complete copy of the new Core Curriculum Content Standards for Language Arts Literacy may also be found at:

(3.1.12.G.3)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> How is society reflected in selected pieces of literature? How is the emphasis on individuality in society reflected in literature? How does literature help one to define oneself? How have social movements inside and outside of the United States shaped one's search for self? What does it mean to be or become a woman or man? Summative Assessment (for Goals 1-2) The students will write a personal narrative. In doing so, they will connect their experiences to themes of identity that have been studied throughout the course. They should address familial, friendship, and cultural values, as well as their gender role in society. Assessment: Teacher evaluation based on NJ Registered Holistic Scoring Rubric.	NOTE: The assessment models provided in this document are suggestions for the teacher. If the teacher chooses to develop his/her own model, it must be of equal or better quality and at the same or higher cognitive levels (as noted in parentheses). Depending upon the needs of the class, the assessment questions may be answered in the form of essays, quizzes, mobiles, PowerPoint, oral reports, booklets, or other formats of measurement used by the teacher. As a character observation activity, the students will fill out a biographical sketch on themselves. The sketch will include information about: their biggest fear, strongest belief, favorite and worst habits, physical and personality characteristics, etc. They will also write down what is difficult for them to discuss and what they find easy to talk about. Assessment: Class participation. Create a novel map. This consists of the following: describing the main characters and tracing their development, providing five quotations from the text that support development of the character, commenting on the quotations and what they suggest about the character, and identifying themes and symbols. Assessment: Teacher evaluation based on a predetermined rubric. (Comprehension, Analysis, Evaluation) Research the concepts and implications of emancipation and discuss how it applies to the novel The Secret Life of Bees. Assessment: Research and class participation.

			Students will compose/amend a scene from the novel that they either think is missing or begging to be written. They will then read their ending to the class. Assessment: Presentation and creative writing piece based on predetermined rubric. (Synthesis) Using the signs of the zodiac, students will write insightful horoscopes for characters. Assessment: Class participation. Students will create a selection of music reflective of the events and themes of the novel and explain how the selected pieces complement the novel. Assessment: Teacher evaluation based on predetermined rubric. (Synthesis, Evaluation) While reading The Kite Runner, in groups of three or four, students will be given small pieces of paper with words taken from the novel. They should piece the words together to make a sentence. Groups are to have a discussion about the meaning of the words and attempt to relate their sentence to any of the following themes: friendship, family, inequality, violence, war, class and cultural identity. The students will relate the theme to their understanding of their own experience and identity as an American. Individually, they will then create a visual product that demonstrates and represents the theme they chose. This product can use any medium including drawing, watercolors, oils,

Assessment: Teacher evaluation of writing based on the NJ Registered Holistic Scoring Rubric. (Synthesis) Write a series of three descriptions that range in difficulty. First, they will describe an object of simple shape and composition (for example, a block or a baseball). They will then write a passage about their hand, and lastly on a photograph of a face. The instructor should point out the different ways people describe the same things. Students should be encouraged to comment on their classmates' work. Assessment: Class participation. Discussion should follow after writing each passage, comparing different versions for detail and completeness. All descriptions must be exact and objective, free of any value judgments. A supplementary assignment might be to have students write a description of themselves. Students should break into small groups of no more than four. They should then be asked to write down an incident from the past which they can clearly remember reacting to in a way which they would not act today. This should be a brief piece of descriptive writing no more than a paragraph or two. Then,

			within each group, the students should decide on which childhood incident they would like to re-enact. The criteria for choosing may vary from the most interesting incident to the most commonly shared within the group. The student whose incident was chosen now becomes the director of the group. One of the group members will be chosen to represent the director whose story is being told. All the group members then will design a scenario to present to the other groups. This may be in the form of an improvisation or a short script of the incident recalled by the director. The director must then coach his group to recreate that incident accurately. Discussion after each performance should concern what characteristic was being portrayed and how that behavior has changed in the director. The director of each group should be a main participant of the discussion with the instructor. Students should compare the exhibited behaviors for similarities and differences among themselves. If time allows, more than one scene per group could easily be done. The poem must be reflective of their own experiences (which is a requirement of slam poetry) and they must also include an explanation of the poetic devices used. Equal weight must be given to the poem and the performance. Assessment: Teacher evaluation based on predetermined rubric. (Application, Comprehension, Synthesis)	Give the students copies of a short scene from the script of a published play (15-20 lines of dialogue). Explain the method of writing subtext to dialogue. Explain to the students that how we analyze the subtext of a character's dialogue tells us a lot about how we perceive that character. Then have the students individually write subtexts under each line of dialogue on the script that was handed out. Compare the various interpretations of the subtexts that the students have written. The students may or may not see certain patterns in the class (for example, boys leaning toward one interpretation different from the girls). The student's should question the lines and their subtexts very specifically, challenging each other as to why they chose to interpret the lines the way they did. If possible, the discussion should go in the direction of not so much as what the line said, but what the student's subtext says about how they have perceived that character. Assessment: Class participation. Upon entering the room students will find three signs posted in three different corners of the classroom. The signs will read: "Listening," "Reading," and "Doing." The teacher will ask the students to think about which one of these three words describes the way they can relate to the world. When they have decided, the teacher will ask them to stand in the appropriate corner. Students will then present to the class why they feel they can relate to a certain category. A discussion will follow which will connect their various learning methods to how they can appreciate poetry.
