

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

courtesy of www.georgesseurat.org

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other.

Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

courtesy of www.georgesseurat.org

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.

Today's Artist: Georges Seurat

Georges Seurat was a French artist during the late 1800's. He is best known for creating a style of art called "pointillism" where his images were made of dabs of different colors placed next to each other. Forms and images were most noticeable from a distance.