Write Historical Fiction at Young Writers' Workshop

Join the ranks of Nathaniel Hawthorne and Edgar Allan Poe and learn how to write short-short fiction when award-winning author Stephanie Hemphill of Chicago returns to the State Historical Museum of Iowa June 11-15 for this year's Young Writers' Workshop.

You'll take a private tour of the museum's vault, select an object from the archives and weave a short-short fictional story about Iowa history using no more than 800 words. You'll cap off the week by giving a public performance of your story and celebrating at a reception with family and friends.
