

Mr. Rutherford: "I nominate Dani Hennen for student of the week. Whether working in groups or individually, Dani is always super engaged and on task in CIS Physics. During whiteboard presentations, she is one of the first to ask questions, and she is always looking to further the discussion and learn. What's more is that Dani does it all with a positive attitude; she smiles or laughs, then gets right back to business. Dani's positivity and work ethic set her apart."

Dani: "Mr. Rutherford makes class so much fun. I love how he is able to connect with each student and knows how to joke around in class, while still getting things done. He is always available to help students out when they have questions and you can tell that he truly values the success of each of his students. "

Mr. Rutherford: "I nominate Kyle Anderson for student of the week. Kyle has as deep understanding of physics concepts as any other student I have seen in 13 years of teaching. On top of that, his math skills are incredible, and he has been a valuable part of conversations in AP Physics. I highly respect and admire Kyle's ability to think deeply about physics, and I'm excited to see where his skills take him."

Kyle: "I like Mr. Rutherford's class because he is a great teacher. When we're in class, he's enthusiastic and he really cares about what he teaches. He cares about his students and I know this because he's helped me a lot. He has helped me be more interested in Physics and I look forward to having more classes with him. "

Mr. Douds: “Taite Stanko created a new style of note taking in my CIS class and it proved to be so successful that she earned an A and even had a few of her peers successfully mimic her strategy! Taite is the kind of student that could slip by without teachers taking much notice. She’ll get good grades and complete her work, but she’ll also remain out of the spotlight most of the time. Instead of letting her slip by this year, I’m shining this spotlight on her. She deserves it!”

Taite: “Mr. Douds made class everyday exciting. He explained concepts in the way that made them stick in your mind and there was never moment I wasn’t interested in what he was teaching us! Mr. Douds will go out of his way to help his students if they are in need and he understood our busy schedules. I loved his CIS Psychology class and because of his teaching style and methods, I would recommend the class to everyone so that they can get the privilege to have Mr. Douds as a teacher!”

Mr. Douds: “Iggy Pham is an interesting character. He is somewhat unassuming, but at the same time he’s been a big personality in my classroom over the last year and a half. Grades don’t always come easy for him, but his work ethic always pulls him through. As the ultimate compliment, I’d say Iggy is the human embodiment of gumption!”

Iggy: “Mr. Douds is one of the best teachers I have ever had! He is always so passionate about the subjects he teaches and that always makes me excited to learn. He always is able to make class fun, but at the same time is able to really stress the concepts you need to know. Mr. Douds is also super understanding if you mess up, but of course you have to pick yourself up. He makes you responsible for your own work and tries his best to support you. That kind of nurturing is what I believe really helps his students grow.”

Mr. Glass: "I am nominating Grace Myler for student of the week. Grace is an incredibly driven student who is going to excel at anything she does in life. She is mature and independent beyond her years. Grace is the student that will always make sure she plans ahead when she is going to be out and also follow up when she returns to make sure she is not missing anything. It is an absolute pleasure having her in class and I hope every teacher at SHS gets to experience the awesomeness that Grace Myler is!"

Grace: "I absolutely love Mr.Glass's history class. He has showed me a new understanding and love for history. History has become one of my favorite classes because Mr.Glass teaches history in such a fun way that makes it more interesting to learn. You can tell by the way he teaches that he truly loves history and teaching. He wants his students to be successful and he is always available when help is needed."

Mr. Glass: "I am nominating Kaden Cavallin for student of the week. It was a joy having Kaden in class first semester and I will surely miss his smile and "Good Morning" each day this semester. Kaden isn't the most outspoken student in the class but when we got the chance to speak about history, Kaden lit up and I could tell that he truly cared about the topics we were discussing. It was so much fun seeing him put his semester project together and how much he enjoyed learning about this topic. Thank you for being you, Kaden!"

Kaden: "I really enjoyed having Mr. Glass first semester; it was an honor having him as my history teacher. The topics were very enjoyable to talk about, and I really enjoyed researching the semester project. Mr. Glass showed me new understandings of history that I'll never forget. Mr. Glass and I had great discussions on some of the topics such as WWII and the Mob; those two subjects I really enjoyed, and it was an absolute pleasure to be in his class."
