TAKE A LOOK AT WHAT WE'RE UP TO IN SUMMER CAMP

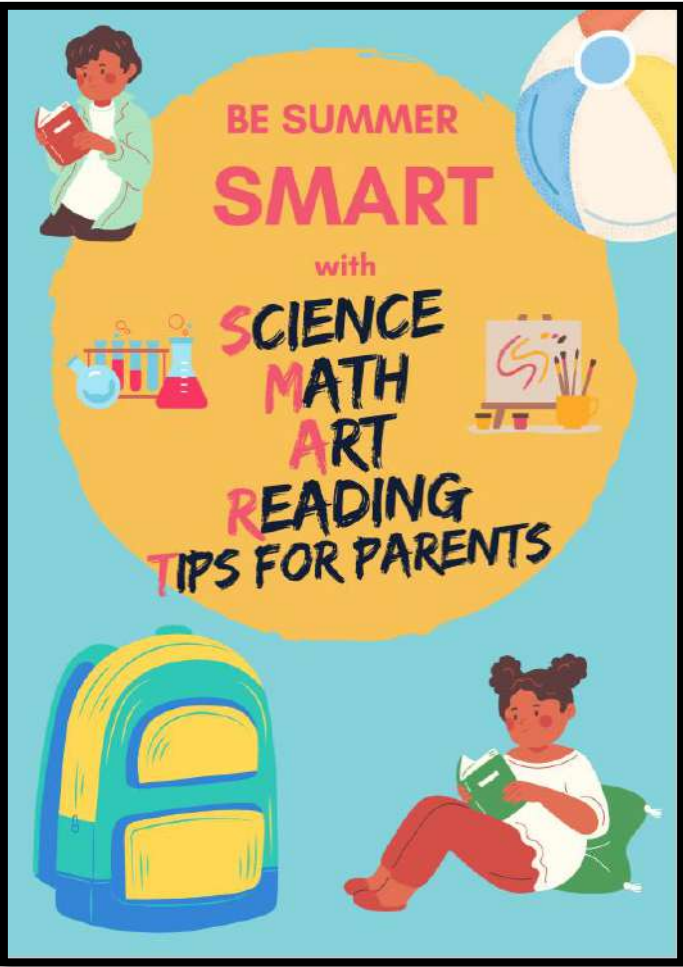

Students received backpacks filled with items from Teacher Created Materials

MS Agricultural Museum

Be Summer Smart

Students were given backpacks stuffed with items to keep them reading over the summer while providing parents with tools to support their child. Each backpack contains engaging fiction and nonfiction texts and a workbook with challenging reading, writing, and mathematics activities to ensure students know the key skills they'll need to succeed at the next grade level. This parent-involvement resource is designed to give parents the tools they need to support their child's learning and development at home.

SEL

 Tosha Taylor, CEO OF iLead Mississippi, is committed to passionately cultivating the leader in each student by fostering his or her personal development and college and career readiness. She met with students at camp to teach effective strategies such as self-awareness, social awareness and relationship skills.

When students arrived to the meeting room, Mrs. Taylor asked the students about different scenarios that they would likely encounter in their up and coming school year. She allowed students to give their honest answers without judgement. Shen then would follow up with asking why the students would respond/react in the way that they told her. She would then give different strategies to approach the same scenario.

“If you were to walk in the lunchroom and notice a student sitting by their self while everyone else is sitting with their peers, what would you do?”, Ms. Taylor asked.

Most students responded by saying that they wouldn’t do anything. Aaron Fell said that he would ask the student if they would want to join at a table he was sitting at but other than that he would leave it alone. Mrs. Taylor told the students to think about the situation as if they were the student sitting alone. She wanted them to think critically about why a student would sit alone in a room filled with people.

Mrs. Taylor is going over real-life scenarios using different strategies to build relationships iLead Mississippi seeks to help young people define who they are, connect who they are with their future goals, and to provide the necessary resources as they make choices with knowledge and integrity. They also focus on college and career readiness by helping youth become productive citizens. They are committed to plan, alongside each young person, future goals, as well as provide a top-notch support system of accountability and action in hopes of producing an emerging generation who will make a systemic impact on society in their chosen professions.
