

Toilet Papers

Welcome to a new and fun reading and writing enrichment activity!

Do you love to read and enjoy sharing your bookish opinions w/others? Do you like art, finding digital book covers, and find yourself collecting ALL the cool quotes?

Then Toilet Papers are for YOU!

Reading is fun, but sharing books is more funununner. Yes, that's a word. I just made it up. :)

Goal: use technology and your OWN thinking to share a bathroom stall book review, including summary skills, quote work, and some form of art.

EC Value: up to 2 per semester, 50 quick check points each.

GRADING NOTE: If not entirely complete, I will ask you to finish it before grading so as to not hurt your total LA grade.

Directions:

#1: Choose a book and enjoy a great read! Place a sticky note or two in your book when you stumble upon a cool quote.

#2: On paper--write a one paragraph summary that covers the basics or GIST of your read. This MUST be your own words! I will check for honor code.

#3: Draw your own book cover OR find one online

#4: Fill in the template, edit carefully, and return by webmail.

Accessible learning for all! One thing I love about teaching is all of the different flowers I get to teach. Sometimes, pale or shiny colors are hard for our friends and teachers to read. Please take care in your color choices.

Imagine being a bright, bookish, and clever child like Ella. Living just off the coast of South Carolina on the purely fictional island of Nollop, young Ella enjoys books, her friends, and exploring her small island community. Like all communities facing a crisis between what is the best way to live and what are the values worth fighting for, the local Council makes a dangerous and terrifying decision to control reading, thinking, and all forms of communication by banning the use of certain letters. While their disastrous decision to protect a memorial statue of a famous author begins to result in disturbing consequences, Ella and her community must now decide which freedoms and worth fighting for and just how far each person is willing to go to protect them.

If you enjoy humor, word play and puns, and strive to be a leader in your family or community Ella Minnow Pea is worth the read!

Toilet Papers

“The Council is wrong. Yet, observe that none of us will risk telling it so, for fear of the consequences.”

SUMMARY OF YOUR CHOSEN BOOK
HERE

Carefully type a 5-8 sentence summary of your
Book. Be careful not to give away the ending!

Place book cover art here!

Insert>>image>>file or a web art is just fine. Feel free to use your own art, too!

Toilet Papers

Type your quote here!! If you'd rather choose another shape, do this:
Insert, shape, click on page, make it big enough to fill this area.