

The history of the United States is the collective story of widely differing narratives. These narratives - from minority groups, women, African Americans, those of European Ancestry, and Native Americans, among countless others - in conjunction with agricultural pursuits, technological advances and differing perspectives on most anything, present a drama through which our national ideals have become forged, cemented and reinforced.

At its core, American history may be best represented as a pendulum of power-shifting behavior; that is, who has power, who seeks to gain it, what do these interests seek to do with it, and who would be affected by these interests.

Subject Learning Outcomes

- ⇒ Students will be able to identify facts and explain the significance of certain events in American history, as well as their impact upon the nation's progress.
- ⇒ Students will develop an appreciation for and enjoyment of learning, especially how learning should cause us to question what we think we know and have a willingness to entertain new perspectives on issues.
- ⇒ Students will be able to look beyond specific events and see how they affect (or are affected by...) broader themes in American history
- ⇒ Students will be able to demonstrate an understanding of causation and how it differs from correlation.
- ⇒ The State of Oregon, The College Board (Advanced Placement) and Southern Oregon University learning standards are content specific and available online.

Skills-Based Learning Outcomes

- ⇒ Students will gain experience with organizing, maintaining and learn how to study from a subject-specific notebook
- ⇒ Students will be able to demonstrate how to take lecture notes
- ⇒ Students will be able to engage in meaningful, respectful, and substantive discussion with others.
- ⇒ Students will be able to demonstrate effective and active reading habits (summarization, questioning, agreeing/disagreeing with the text, etc.)
- ⇒ Students will be able to synthesize different facts to make broader conclusions.
- ⇒ Students will be able to identify learning strategies which work for themselves.
- ⇒ Students will be able to argue and defend a position in written and verbal formats
- ⇒ Students will be able to express themselves through fluent writing and with appropriate grammar and sentences

Behavioral Expectations and Grading Policy

- ⇒ Attendance, participation and being prepared are daily expectations
- ⇒ A classroom culture of respect and tolerance is critical to create a comfortable environment for all to learn.
- ⇒ Digital and electronic devices will not be in use during class time without teacher permission.
- ⇒ Do not hesitate to ask questions at any time and for any relevant reason.

Please see supplemental handout on this topic for specifics on classroom rules and

In the case of multiple instructors teaching the same subjects, while instructors proceed through lessons at their own pace - out of respect for the integrity of one another's classrooms, teaching styles and expertise - they will strive to never be more than ten days apart in curriculum and from time to time will use common written/essay/examination assessments which may be evaluated jointly. As administration supports, instructors hope to meet regularly to discuss their common courses.

Comprehensive Approach Toward The Course

Comprehensive United States History Thematic Approach	The history of the United States may be best interpreted through power-shifting behaviors; that is, who has power and at the expense of whom? Viewed through the lens of Federalist and anti-Federalist poles, identify and explain the shifting foundations of the United States over time.

Enduring Multi-Unit Themes

"America was founded upon freedom and equal opportunity." As you consider whether you agree or disagree with this statement, be sure to identify and explain the relevance of specific examples from American history in support of your position.
Identify and explain the extent to which World War II was a continuation of the first world war.
Identify and explain the principles of the American Revolution in contrast to those of American imperialism, and assess commonalities.
Identify and explain the problems of appeasement prior to World War II, and compare these matters with those of containment during the Cold War.
Identify and explain the iconoclastic challenges to the established order in the latter half of the 20th Century.
America in the 1920s, 1960s and 1990s has experienced such a tremendous amount of growth - technologically, culturally, legally, etc - that by the end of each era the nation was incapable of returning to where it was prior to the era's start. Identify specific elements which support this assertion of societal transformation, explain how they relate to or reinforce one another, and assess if

"Overarching Social Studies Thematic Approach"

This is an overarching approach for all courses in the Social Studies department

"Comprehensive Approach Toward The Course"

This presents the broad approach and lens through which material in this course will be examined.

"Enduring Multi-Unit Themes"

These are questions, themes or big ideas which stretch across multiple, sometimes overlapping, units. It provides an opportunity for students to connect historical and contemporary dots over time.

"Individual Instructional Units"

These are the targeted learning outcomes (Power Standards) per unit of instruction. They are amended by key learning targets, essential vocabulary, and essential figures. This latter category offers examples of figures who represent different poles on any given spectrum of perspectives for students to identify with.

In Other Words . . .

The "Individual Instructional Units" allow a student to walk into a bookstore, glance at a book and have a sense of what that book may be about before they even open it. "Enduring Multi-Unit Themes" allow a student to finish the book, return to browse 50 titles remaining in the bookstore and recognize these books all talk to each other; that is, that these books offer different focus, perspective or emphasis on related topics.
