

MRS CHEN by Mrs. Wilson's Class

A mnemonic, an acrostic
So you won't forget again
Here's a song for seven energies
Just remember MRS CHEN

M's for motor, M's for motion,
M's for mills and for machines
Ride your bike or sharpen pencils
It's mechanical that you need

R's for radiant, R's for radio,
R's the energy of the sun
Solar power feeds the flowers
And it makes the Rover run

S is splash and S is squeaky
S goes sizzle, S goes splat
S is sound with waves of energy
Loud as sirens, soft as cats

In your car or when you're cooking
C is chemical energy
In your flashlight or your Kindle
It's the fuel in batteries

Snuggle up under a blanket
H is heat that keeps you warm
In your bedroom in the winter
There's a shelter from the storm

E's electrical, E's electrons
In your house, they light the lights
Don't be crazy like Ben Franklin
In the lightning with a kite

N's for nuclear reactions
Like the sun, that burning ball
There's an energy in the atoms
It is great though they are small

A mnemonic, an acrostic
So you won't forget again
Here's a song for seven energies
Just remember MRS CHEN

Sing to the tune of "Clementine"
Words by Jud Caswell and Mrs. Wilson's third
