Helpful Hints from the Counseling Department

Strategies to Staying Calm During Tests

Before the test:

- *If you are aware that you have a problem with test anxiety, be sure that your teacher knows before any testing begins (and not the hour before!). There may be other options to evaluate your knowledge or performance within the subject matter, or your teacher may have other "stress-reducing" tricks to help you out.
- *Be prepared! Learn your material thoroughly, but avoid last minute cramming. Try to keep up day to day, attending tutorials or getting help right away if material seems confusing or particularly difficult.
- *Exercise regularly. Studies show that regular exercise sharpens the mind and reduces stress.
- *Stop studying the day of the test and DO NOT TALK ABOUT THE TEST WITH CLASSMATES. If you are prepared, studying the day of the test may only cause higher anxiety and cause you to second guess your answers. So, no "last minute" reviews. Talking about the test or how much someone else prepared will raise your anxiety level. And, talking may nourish group paranoia.
- *Do not compare yourself. Your grades are not your classmates concerns. It does not matter how well or how poorly they do. Set a realistic goal for yourself and do not get involved in the "whaja' get?" competitions that go on among classmates and even friends.
- *Know time and place of the test and what you need to bring. Be on time, neither too early nor too late, with paper or other supplies. Don't rush.
- *Get a good night's sleep the night of the exam and a good protein breakfast. Avoid sweet foods or a heavily carbohydrate breakfast/ lunch that may cause lethargy or a "sugar- low."
